

SENATE IS DISPOSED TO HURRY BUSINESS

PRESENT PLAN IS TO CLEAR
AWAY APPROPRIATION MEAS-URES AND ADJOURN.

ARE DRIVEN BY VETO

According to Senator John Sharp
Williams Who Can See No Use of Staying When Taft Disapproves
Bills.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, Aug. 10.—The senate today showed a disposition to clear up the appropriation bills and adjourn. Several senators asked consideration of special measures in which they are interested failed to get a quorum. The way was cleared for the completion of the postoffice appropriation bill.

"The president has vetoed the wool bill and probably will veto all the other tariff bills so I don't see much use of staying here," said Senator John Sharp Williams. The steel bill is at the White House. The sugar bill and the excise tax bill are still in conference.

To Sign Canal Bill.

President Taft told several callers today that he expected to sign the Panama canal bill passed by the house yesterday carrying provisions against the use of the canal by railroad owned ships and granting free tolls to all American vessels.

The president is said to have declared that some of the provisions did not meet with his views entirely, but that he expected to approve it.

Railroad and legal experts in congress held the view today that the senate had authorized a highly important extension of the power of the interstate commerce commission in adopting the Bourne amendment to the Panama canal bill.

Free from Duty.

Wood pulp, print paper, and paper board manufactured from woods of British Columbia from which the export restrictions were recently removed by the council of that province, will be admitted to the United States free of duty under the operative clause of the Canadian reciprocity act.

Secretary Knox today was designated by President Taft a special representative of the United States at the funeral of Mutohito the late emperor of Japan and will leave Washington for San Francisco and the Orient next Thursday. The funeral will be held Sept. 13. Mr. Knox is expected back in this country early in October.

Korean Missionaries.

It was admitted at the state department today that while in the east Mr. Knox would see and talk with Viscount Uchida, minister of foreign affairs. Secretary Knox's mission will be performed at a time when at least one question of much interest to the United States is pending in the far east. It is the case of the Korean missionaries in which several American have been accused by natives of having been implicated in a plot to assassinate the governor general of Korea.

A Timely Visit.

So far no official correspondence is known to have passed between the two countries on the subject though it is one of grave interest. The recently reported understanding between Japan and Russia to govern their attitude towards China also makes Mr. Knox's visit to Japan a timely one.

Aid to Refugees.

Appropriations of $20,000 for the support of American refugees from Mexico now in Arizona was authorized today under a resolution by Senator Smith of that state.

Sends Special Message.

President Taft in a special message to congress to day urged the appropriation of $255,350 to strengthen the Indian medical corps and stamp out tuberculosis, trachoma and other contagious diseases. The death rate in the Indian country is 35 per thousand and millions of white people Mr. Taft declared were endangered by the disease among the nations wards.

CORRUPT PRACTICES CASE AT MANITOWOC

Manitowoc, Aug. 10.—Socialists are said to be behind a move that may result in the first prosecution here under the corrupt practices act. Evidence is said to have been secured by the socialist managers of alleged violation of the law by a candidate on an opposing ticket and it is reported that attorneys have been retained to institute proceedings in an attempt to bar the candidate from the ticket in the primary. There is a sharp fight in the county this year and socialists seem to think that they have a chance to name one or more county officers.

LUMBER FIRM HAS GIVEN UP CHARTER

Chippewa Falls Company Has Left
State Because of Income Tax Law.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Chippewa Falls, Wis., Aug. 10.—The Calcasieu Lumber Company which was organized under the laws of Wisconsin, with offices here, has surrendered its charter to the state and re-incorporated under the laws of the state of Maine, which are said to be favorable to industrial enterprises.

The officers and directors of the Calcasieu Lumber Co., became convinced that the laws of Wisconsin were too antagonistic towards industrial corporations, hence it was a matter for them to surrender their charter here and to re-incorporate under the laws of another state.

This concern is one of the largest holders of southern pine lands and operates saw mills at Glen Mora and Leesville, La., and other southern points.

It is also noticed that the Weyerhaeuser syndicate is fast closing out all its holdings in Wisconsin and is not reinvesting in any new enterprise in this state. The Weyerhaeuser people and their associates have in the past operated large industrial enterprises in this state and employed thousands of men at good wages. The losses will be great to a number of communities in northern Wisconsin from the failure of the Weyerhaeuser interests to continue industrial enterprises.

Similar conditions prevail throughout Northern Wisconsin in the villages and cities where lumber companies have formerly operated and have ceased sawing timber. Residents of those places are now looking in vain for new enterprises to take the place of the once flourishing lumber mills. So far the industries are not coming and the talk is general that they will not come so long as the state laws are retained that are so drastic in the operation of factories.

For the past three years thousands of residents of northern Wisconsin have gone west, south or into the Canadian Northwest to find opportunities for a livelihood. The constant exodus of these former residents is regarded with considerable concern by the people who are trying to develop the cities and towns of northern Wisconsin.

Business leagues in the northern part of the state have practically ceased to ask industries to come and locate in their cities for it is only too plain that such a request would be flatly ignored. The situation is regarded as critical and there is an intense feeling among the people against the drastic laws which were enacted by the last legislature and which are based more on theory than on practical value.

Meanwhile, expenses of the state government have increased to such an extent that there is an insistent demand for less commissions, greater economy and a cessation of attacks by the state legislature upon the industries of the state.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Edmonton, Alta., Aug. 10.—Beginning today with the formal reception of the visitors, this city for the next four days will be the central point for medical men from all over the Dominion. The occasion is the annual convention of the Canadian Medical Association. Dr. H. G. Mackie, of Calgary, is president of the association and will occupy the chair at the general sessions. Dr. Arthur E. Giles, a noted surgeon of London, England, is to deliver the annual address on surgery, and Dr. A. Blackader of Montreal will deliver the address on medicine. The subjects which will be brought before the general sessions and sectional conferences, while largely technical, are of considerable importance to the medical world. Much interest is manifested in the proposal to inaugurate a new system of medical registration, whereby the old provincial registration will be abolished and replaced by one embracing the whole Dominion.

MANY PUT TO DEATH IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

One Hundred and Fifty Four Executed in New York Death Chair—
Used Twenty-two Years

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, Aug. 10.—Twenty-two years ago this week, on Aug. 6, 1890, William Kemmler, a condemned murderer, was put to death in the electric chair in Auburn prison. Kemmler was the first person to be legally executed by electricity in the United States and his case was the subject of wide discussion at the time. The action of New York in substituting the electric for the gallows has been found generally satisfactory and her example has been followed by Ohio, Virginia, South Carolina, Massachusetts, and Kentucky and New Jersey.

Since the execution of Kemmler there have been 154 persons put to death in the electric chair in New York. The state prison authorities estimate that it costs about $400 per individual to carry out the capital punishment mandate. On the basis of this estimate New York State has expended about $55,000 for electrocutions since that form of inflicting the death penalty was introduced.

Several times the electric chair at Sing Sing has two victims in one day, and on one occasion a short time ago three persons were put to death within a period of twenty-four hours. But never before has there been such a wholesale execution of death sentences imposed on prisoners in this state as is scheduled to take place at Sing Sing next week. Nine men are to die on the same day, and in rapid succession in as they can be led to the death chair. Six of the nine prospective victims are the Italians, who were convicted of the atrocious murder of Mrs. Mary Hall at Croton Lake, Westchester county, on Nov. 9, 1911.

PROTECT NEW YORK IN MIMIC CAMPAIGN

National Guard of Brooklyn And Manhattan Leave For Maneuvers In Connecticut Hills.

New York, Aug. 10.—New York City presented a warlike appearance early today as long columns of "troops" in full campaign gear marched through the streets followed by wagon trains and concentrated at the different transportation points. The troops were the headquarters of the first and second brigades and special troops of the national guard of Manhattan and Brooklyn and they were making the first move in the great war game to be played for the next few days among the hills of Connecticut. The "war" is known as "The Connecticut Maneuver Campaign" and the problem involved is the defense of this city from an attack of a foreign army advancing from Boston.

NEWPORT SOCIETY THROWS ANNUAL KENNEL CLUB SHOW

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Newport, R. I., Aug.—Newport society threw the Casino today to admire and pet the one thousand or more dogs on exhibition there at the annual bench show of the Rhode Island Kennel Club. It was an aristocratic show throughout. There was no place for an ordinary dog in the exhibition. A line of blue-blooded canine ancestors was the only ticket that insured admittance. Even class distinctions prevailed among the dogs, the haughty Blenheim spaniels absolutely ignoring the breezy looking French and English bulldogs.

$21,000 Fortune Already Located in
New York Savings Banks as Part of Becker's Bribe Fund.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, Aug. 10.—Clothing his identity under assumed names Police Lieut. Becker, now behind jail bars accused of the murder of gambler Rosenthal is said by the members of the state attorneys force today to have deposited thousands of dollars in several savings banks. These deposits were the proceeds, the public prosecutor believes of gambling blackmail.

The total of all account said to belong to the police lieutenant amounts to about $21,000. Becker's salary as a policeman is $2,350 a year. The district attorney has also investigated the bank accounts of two police inspectors. These inspectors are said to have on deposit sums of money aggregating many thousands of dollars.

District Attorney Whitman before departing for a two days' rest in Manchester Vt. indicated that he believed that the police knew where Harry Horowitz and Louis Rosenzweig the two much wanted gun men could be found. The public prosecutor points out that "Dago Frank" Crovolic and "Whitley" Louis, were not taken into custody by the police until his own detectives were close on the trail of the two gun men.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Milwaukee, August 10.—Voting strength of 38,000 members of the German American alliance in Wisconsin may be thrown against women suffrage at the fall elections if the alliance as a body, adopts the sentiments today expressed at the opening session of the annual meeting.

"It is the duty of every delegate present here and as every member of our organization to vote for or against women suffrage when the question arises in the fall," said President Leo Stern, assistant superintendent of the Milwaukee schools in his opening address. "It is a question on which all should express themselves. I do not mean to indicate which way you shall vote, personally, I shall vote against it."

Bounds of applause greeted his words. The convention opened with four hundred delegates representing all sections of the state in attendance. All addresses are made and all business transacted in German.

SAYS THAT REPEAL OF INCOME TAX LAW MEANS A HARDSHIP

Commissioner Haugen in Defense of Much Mooted Measures Urges
Its Justice and Fairness.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Aug. 10.—A declaration that repeal of the income tax law would automatically restore all moneys and credits to the rolls for taxation under the former personal property rate and would result in a tax many times larger than required under the income tax, is contained in a statement today by Nils P. Haugen, chairman of the state tax commission. From an analysis of his statement it is evident that the tax commission possesses such information as would lead to a nearly complete enrollment of taxable property much of which heretofore was overlooked or otherwise omitted from the tax lists, should the income tax law be repealed.

In the city of Madison, according to Chairman Haugen, the restoration of the personal property tax would result in some individuals and corporations paying nearly six times as much taxes as they would pay under the income tax law. What is true of Madison, he adds, is true of practically every other city in the state. Under the income tax law an individual or corporation would pay not to exceed three mills on the face value of a thousand-dollar security, while under the personal property tax system, which would necessarily be restored if the income law was repealed, the owner would have to pay the local tax rate, which in the city of Madison is 17 1/2 mills.

Lead to Complication.
"Those who simply shout for the repeal of the income tax law do not seem to have any idea as to where such action on the part of the legislature would leave the people of the state of Wisconsin," said Mr. Haugen, who was asked if he thought the income tax law would be repealed. "Repealing the law without further legislation leads to a complication of the tax question that can hardly be realized. The income tax law itself amends the law in regard to the exemption of personal property and materially increases such exemptions. Repealing it restores every article of personal property mentioned in that part of it which treats of exemption to the taxable list."

"Repealing the tax law would make all moneys and credits, including stocks and bonds, taxable locally at their true cash value. It would make taxable every article of wearing apparel, every article of household and kitchen furniture, musical instruments of all kinds, and all growing crops. It would also make taxable the tools of a mechanic kept and used in his trade, no matter how small the value, all farm, orchard and garden machinery, implements and tools, no matter how insignificant in value."

Would Need Substitute.

"Those who cry out against the income tax may labor under the impression that repealing it would restore the old state of affairs, but it would not. Our tax laws expressly provide that 'taxes shall be levied upon all property in this state except such as is exempted therefrom.' Another part of the tax law provides, designating certain articles as belonging in the personal property class, that personal property shall also include 'all goods, wares, merchandise, chattels and effects of any nature or description.'"

"It is idle to speak of the repeal of the income tax law without proposing in connection therewith a substitute—something no one has as yet mentioned. Those who cry out loudest against the income tax are undoubtedly parties who under the old system escaped their due share of taxes. Moneys and credits especially, in the city of Madison—as far as this section of the state is concerned—were very inadequately assessed. In the report of the tax commission for 1909 it appears that there were less than one million dollars worth of moneys and credits assessed in all the cities and villages of Dane county. Let the farmers take note of this: Much of the income from this source will be taxed under the income tax law. Those men who have formerly escaped their just share of taxes will be compelled under the income tax law to pay taxes at a very light rate compared with that which was due from them under the former law."

Means Re-assessments.

"Take, for instance, a man with a security the face value of which is $1,000, drawing five percent interest. The income under the property tax is $50. In Madison under the property tax he would have to pay, at the rate of last winter, $17.50 in taxes. Under the income tax, if his taxable income did not exceed $1,000 he would have to pay 50c in taxes. If his taxable income was $3,000 he would have to pay at the rate of $1 on each thousand dollars of value instead of $17.50 as was the former law."

"Yes, repeal the income tax law, and have a re-assessment of the city of Madison, as is probable and imminent, and the tax burden would be changed from one against the personal property tax to one against the income tax. The difficulty with the personal property tax as applied to many taxpayers was that they escaped their taxes either through misrepresentation to the assessor or through that official disregarding his duties."

"It is possible, of course, that the income tax rate would be higher than two per cent, but that would be only in the case of very large incomes. Six per cent would never be reached in the case of individuals. In the case of corporations the six per cent rate is frequent, but even applying the rate to the income from investments would be a tax of $3 on the thousand dollar security mentioned, instead of $17.50, as was the rate in Madison last winter; that is, under the income tax law an individual or corporation would pay not to exceed three mills on the face value of the security, while under the personal property tax as we have it he would have had to pay 17 1/2 mills, or nearly six times as much. Does anyone want to go back to the old system, or do they hope they can go back to the old system and evade their taxes as heretofore?"

William Bender, American Citizen,
Escapes From Rebel Captors Who Condemned Him to Death.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

San Francisco, Aug. 10.—A tale of adventure and suffering in Mexico was told here today by William Bender, who said he arrived from the southern republic by way of Nogales. He told of his capture as a spy, of having been held as a prisoner by his rebel captors who made a slave of him; of being condemned to death by a court martial; of his escape and a tramp of 400 miles to reach the United States. Bender, according to his account, went prospecting in Chihuahua. He was arrested as an American spy by rebels and was held captive for eight months and made to do menial work in camp. "I heard of the foulness of Mexican prisons but I never imagined there could be a place so awful as that into which I was thrown," he said. "One day the guards threw into my cell two rattlesnakes with the hope they would kill me. I killed the snakes. The same performance was repeated later."

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Detroit, Aug. 10.—It is admitted today that prosecuting attorney Hugh Shepherd has in his possession the confession of three of the 18 city officials now under arrest in connection with recent developments in the local aldermanic graft scandal. Two of the confessions are said to have been made by aldermen and the third is accredited to Edward Schirer, Secretary of common councils committee, and a society member of the society of municipalities. Schirer's confession is said to have been in detail and the most comprehensive of the three. He has been acting in a confidential capacity with the common council for 15 years and is alleged that he statement covers councilman records for several years. Prosecutor Shepherd said more arrests were likely to be made Monday.

He Merely Pointed Out Attitude of Negroes in Republican Convention to Indicate Erroneous Position.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Oyster Bay, Aug. 10.—How near the progressive party came to a break at its first national convention was told today by Colonel Roosevelt. The negro question, he said, created a breach which for a time threatened to make serious trouble. The disagreement, said Roosevelt, was largely due to the fact that some of the northern delegates who are genuinely anxious to help the negro and the South did not understand how to do it.

They told the colonel that by refusing to give the blacks in the South representation he was treating them unfairly and they could not consent to such action.

Col. Roosevelt's reply, he said, was to point out to them the attitude of the negro delegates in the republican convention and to say if they wished to create these conditions within the progressive party they must do it without him. In the fact of this ultimatum the colonel had his way and he believes he succeeded in convincing those at first opposed to him that it was the right way.

"It was the only way, absolutely," Colonel Roosevelt said. "If the new party should win," he continued, "many people would say six months after election that the plan had failed because the negro still suffered from injustice. But in ten years," he continued, "they would understand that a step in advance had been taken and the country was on the right way toward the solution of the whole problem. Colonel Roosevelt cheerfully admitted that the progressive party, in framing its platform, had taken material from the democrats.

"William J. Bryan says you have taken democratic ideas," he was told. "We have," he replied with a smile. "We have taken all the democratic ideas except those fit for inmates of a lunatic asylum."

Colonel Roosevelt received a telegram which he said pleased him greatly. It was sent from Bremerton, navy yard, near Seattle, and extended congratulations of the crew of the battleship Oregon on account of his nomination.

Austin, Tex., Aug. 10.—The secretary of war early today had sent no reply to the message from Governor Colquitt of Texas which reported raiding by rebels along the Mexican border. The governor had declared that if the United States did not offer aid to protect the people of Texas, state troops would be ordered out to drive the marauders back across the border. Sheriff Edwards, who headed a posse to Sierra Blanco, wired the governor that several bands of Mexicans had crossed the border and that mounted men would be required to control them. NEW STEAM TURBINE CARRIES FIRST LOAD Power Producing Unit of Janesville Electric Company Operates in Satisfactory Manner.

The new steam turbine generator of the Janesville Electric Company carried a part of the power and lighting load for the first time last evening. It was also used this morning and will be run again this evening. The operation of the new unit has been altogether satisfactory. It has not yet been run at its full capacity of 500 kilowatts, or approximately 700 horsepower, but has carried a load of more than 200 kilowatts. The present boiler equipment is not sufficient to run it at its full capacity except for a few minutes at a time.

Friction and wear is almost reduced to the vanishing point in this type of machine. Oil under pressure is supplied to all bearings and is used over and over again, being passed through a water cooler which reduces its temperature. The only loss of oil is through evaporation and wearing down, and not more than two quarts of oil at the most have to be replaced once a week. Absolutely no packing is used in the machine, water under pressure being used instead. A fan at each end of the dynamo keeps the coils from becoming overheated. The Terry turbine which operates the condensing apparatus passes its exhausts through a tank and heats the boiler-water. There are many gauges on the machine which require close watching. Two indicate oil pressure on the regulating valve and bearings, others the steam, exhaust, vacuum, and cooling water pressures.

CIRCUS STORY

In the series of articles written by David Watt for the Gazette during the past few weeks, Mr. Watt has taken his readers through his business years connection with the circus, and of the various circuses he was connected with. That his stories have been most interesting and entertaining is certain and those who have looked for this Saturday feature will be pleased to read some of the incidents that happened, happenings that never were read in print and many of them ones even the most subtle press agent forgot to write.

Circus life is not all shiny spangles and gilt. It is good hard work. The successful performers of the saw dust arena are men and women who take care of themselves they work hard and faithfully and if they smile while riding about the ring in gay costume, it is part of their profession. Their work is hard, their hours long, but if you have ever been fortunate enough to slip behind the canvas wall of the dressing room you have found the bespangled lady of the ring is very much of woman interested in women's affairs and most often working some dainty bit of fancy work or reading a volume of the latest novels.

Most often the noted performers have long been noted their acrobatic, or equestrian acts. They have been brought up to the work and take as much interest in their success as others in various lines of work. The same is true of the men. The clowns may be solemn visaged men in every day life, who take life most seriously, men who are profound thinkers on many subjects and well read. They are sober and industrious and when they retire from the life they usually have sufficient for their old age.

Mr. Watt has had a rare opportunity to meet and know these nomadic people. His long experience with the managerial end of the circuses has given him a rare insight into the characteristics of the people who live and work beneath the "big tops." In his articles that are to come he will take his friends, the public, into the mysteries of the circus life as they could not otherwise travel.

One year with the Forepaugh show, while showing in Fremont, Nebraska, a terrific storm came up in the evening just after the performance had commenced and the lightning struck the big top and in ten minutes it was burned to the ground. A panic ensued and the people went in every direction, but fortunately no one was seriously hurt.

In the elephant tent there were 29 elephants and they went on a rampage and started in all directions and were unable in the darkness to find but 22 in time to load up and leave for the next town.

We left men and cars back and as soon as daylight came a search was made for the other seven. They had gone in different directions and that afternoon two were found about three miles south of Fremont in the river, baling.

The other five had gone in different directions and every few hours a farmer would come in on horse back and tell that he saw an elephant in his neighborhood.

Some had gone as far as eight miles away and it was three days before they were all gotten together and shipped on to the show, and it was fair to say that many of the farmers and their families slept in the top stories of their houses.

When young Forepaugh and his assistants found the two in the river they got boats and started out to bring them in. When they would get near them they would fill their trunks and throw the water all over them, and they were four hours before they could get them ashore.

The burning of the canvas did not delay the show for we always carried duplicate tents and the show opened the next day just the same, only that we were seven elephants short.

In '79, with the Burr Robbins show we were touring the northern part of the state by wagon and on Saturday showed in Black River Falls. We were to have a Sunday drive to Tomah, Wis., a distance of 40 miles, and this was one of the hardest times that I ever had with a wagon show, for it was a dead pull through the sand almost the entire 40 miles.

We had breakfast on the lot at 2 o'clock and at the hotel at 3 and immediately started for Tomah. I told Delevan, the boss hostler, to keep everything together and keep pulling till he overtook me. I was going ahead to pick out a place to camp and feed and rest up for three or four hours during the middle of the day.

Johnnie Smith was the leader of the band as he had been several years, rode with me to Tomah. We rode 22 miles of the 40 before we could find a farm house where we could buy hay and grain for the stock. As I pulled up in front of the little farm house a small man came out to the gate and I said to him, "Are you the boss?" and with a half smile on his face he said, "When me wife's not at home, I would say him what I wanted and that I would pay him well for feed enough to feed our stock, and while the men, who had charge of the cook tent, had plenty to feed the working men, there were 56 performers with the show, who he had to provide for.

He said he had plenty of salt pork, chickens and eggs, but his wife could not cook for so many. I told him there were several good cooks with the show and if he would sell me the material, we would do our own cooking.

This they did and as soon as the show arrived, which was about 10 o'clock, everybody went to work getting dinner. Some of the women went to making biscuits, others picking chickens and that was one of the best picnic dinners that I ever sat down to, and nobody enjoyed it any more than Mr. and Mrs. Noonan.

We stayed there till about three and then pulled out for Tomah, a distance of 13 miles. After the show had all gone away and I had settled with Mr. Noonan, he said to me, "Mr. Watt, I think me wife and I will have to come to Tomah for breakfast. I don't think there is anything left in the house."

I said to him that I would be glad to have them come to Tomah and be my guests for the day. They said they would get up early and drive in the next morning. I said to them that I would have breakfast ready for them at the hotel at 7 o'clock.

I told the landlord at the hotel to have breakfast for three at seven sharp, for I had two guests that were to drive from the country and have breakfast with me. At 6:30 he came up and called me and he said, "Breakfast will be ready in a few minutes and your guests are down stairs waiting for you."

They had breakfast with me at the hotel and dinner at the cook tent and stayed for the afternoon show and when they started for home they said to me, "This is two days that we certainly have enjoyed ourselves and hope some time we will see you again." And I hope they are still living for if a couple could live in a happy, desolate place and still keep smiling, which they did, they certainly should live on.

Late in the season, the same year, we went into Illinois and there struck the fall rains and it rained almost constantly for two weeks. We got down to what was known as the Wabash Flats and here the Wabash river had overflowed its banks and in places was a mile wide. We had a pilot to take us over the road for the water was anywhere from six inches to three feet on both sides of the bridge. Mr. and Mrs. Robbins started early and while in about the center of the road and at least half a mile from the show their whipple trees to the carriage broke and the team ran away, leaving them stranded there in the water.

I overtook them in a few minutes and their driver and I unhooked my team and hitched them on their carriage, patched it up the best we could and got them ashore. Then had to drive my team back and bring my carriage on.

Mrs. Robbins was never away from the show, always took tickets at the front door, afternoon and evening, and in any kind of trouble during the show she was always one of the bravest, and was certainly fitted for the business.

But we did not mind the hardships as much then for the show was to close a few days later at Harvard, Ill., where it rained all day, afternoon and evening.

These instances or similar ones were constantly coming up in the show business and I thought they might interest you.

SUMMER COLDS

Are Considered by Doctors More Dangerous Than Winter Colds.

A person is quite as apt to catch cold in the summer as in the winter, but it is harder to cure a cold in the summer than in the winter. In winter the bracing air assists the remedy to overcome the cold, but the sultry, depressing weather of summer retards the cure of colds.

The public is much interested in knowing a remedy that will successfully cope with summer colds. A remedy that covers just such cases is Peruna. Experience has taught that it is the one remedy that promptly expels summer colds of every character and description.

Miss Ivy Gray, Fairview, Ky., says: "I have taken Peruna, and would say that it is the best medicine for coughs and colds I ever saw. I find that it always cures a cold in a short while. It also strengthens and builds up the system."

SPECIAL NOTICE — Many persons are making inquiries for the old-time Peruna. To such would say, this formula is now put out under the name of KAT-ARNO, manufactured by KAT-ARNO COMPANY, Columbus, Ohio. Write them and they will be pleased to send you a free booklet.

Keep your eye on the bay colt, Baldy McGregor. She was bought at North Randall last week by John E. Madden, the Kentucky turfman for $7,000 and won the second heat of her winning race the first day at Piquette, by far the fastest performance of a colt of her age this season.

Numerous "Box Champions" are seeking recognition in the preliminaries at the American Checker tournament at Cedar Point. It is likely that the last day of the contest will see the American champion, Newell W. Banks, of Detroit; the British champion, Alfred Jordan, formerly of London, but now of Toledo, and the Canadian champion, Henry W. Teetzel, of Goshawk, Ontario, fighting for the honor of the meet, the trophies and the $2,000 prize money that go with them.

Rube Marchant, a young Virginian, who put 27 men down in succession in Knoxville, recently pitched for Johnson City against Bristol, Appalachian league leaders, and not a hit was made against him.

Some people who were associated with the Washington club back in 1907 when Clyde Milan came from Wichita, Kan., and reported to Joe Cantillon for starring purposes, say Clyde acquired his speed on the bases by answering the summons to meals in the club's various hotels. In the Atlanta league from which he sprang, the eating was not first class. So Milan was always on his toes down the hall, awaiting the signal of a black waiter with a white rapkin at the dining room door. Many ball-players have eaten themselves out of a league, but not Milan. He was far in arrears when he came to the big folks that he has never caught up.

Lajolo hasn't been himself since he returned to the game. In eight games he has been at bat 29 times and made only four safe hits, which is an average of .138. His work affords looks good in figures as he is credited with 22 putouts, 21 assists and charged with two errors, a rating of .956. Larry doesn't think his age is beginning to tell on him, but he certainly isn't himself right now.

Mrs. Margaret Lawler, eighteen years old, won the 150 mile endurance contest of the Kenosha Motorcycle club against a field of 27 men. Five men finished with perfect scores, but their time was not as good.

Johnny Summers, popular English featherweight boxer, will soon make another trip to America. He is now fighting lightweight and wants to get on a battle with Ad Wolgast or Freddie Welsh.

OUTING FOR SCOUTS AT LAKE KOSHKONONG

Thirty of Older Boys Will Camp for A Week Under the Charge of Scoutmaster Jaeke.

Scoutmaster Jaeke expects to arrange a week's outing for the members of the local scout organization at least fourteen years of age and above at Lake Koshkonong. A mass meeting of all the scouts has been called at the Spanish War Veterans hall this evening at seven-thirty to discuss the matter and determine how many will go into camp. Mr. Jaeke hopes to have at least thirty boys and will probably leave here the first of the week, providing the weather is favorable.

During the time in camp the boys will drill with the idea of giving an exhibition at the auditorium sometime this fall. The plan is now proposed includes a program of drills by the scouts, and by lodge drill teams with music by the Bower City band, and other entertainment features. The proceeds will be divided between the scout and playground funds.

Mr. Jaeke stated today that he hoped by separating the larger and smaller boys he can drill them more effectively and thus secure better results. The smaller boys he plans to give an outing at Palmyra the latter part of the month. Robert Carle will go into camp with the scouts at Koshkonong and will assist Capt. Jaeke in drilling the boys.

At The Theatre

HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES.
The most peculiar fact is, that not all good stories will make a good play. In fact, new stories, transplanted from the realm of "one of the six best sellers," to the realm of the footlights, ever survive one season but are relegated to the junk heap, with a speed that gives Mr. Producer pause. Seldom has a novel, in dramatic form, been attended with such success as "The House of a Thousand Candles," by Meredith Nicholson. The play was first produced at the Hackett Theatre, in New York, where it ran for one entire season, and for the past few seasons has maintained its place among the really successful plays on the road.

Scene from "The House of a Thousand Candles," at Myers Theatre Sunday, Matinee and Night.

Mr. Trimmose, the present producer, has the play equipped in a very sumptuous manner with a complete scenic equipment. The cast is an excellent one, with Mr. Holland as Bates and Miss Reilly as Marian. To be seen here on Sunday, Aug. 11, at the Myers Theatre.

THE SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS.

"The Shepherd of the Hills," a dramatization of Harold Bell Wright's novel of the same name by Mr. Wright and Elsie W. Reynolds, is announced for production at the Myers Theatre, Sunday, August 25, on matinee and evening.

Never in the history of publishing of books has a novel attained such a widespread popularity in the short space of four years. It has exceeded by over one hundred thousand copies the sale of the previous biggest seller "David Harum." In making a play of his story the author, in collaboration with Mr. Reynolds, has retained the big dramatic possibilities of the book, making the love story of "Young Matt" and "Sammy Lane" its big theme. The play would be interesting even if it only depended upon its excellent character-drawing to captivate, as the characters of the mountaineers of the Ozarks are indeed unusual upon the stage and lend a picturesqueness that is really worth while.

Several horses will be here from stables in Northern Illinois and horse owners in Minneapolis and other places in Northern Minnesota have entered their animals. The first day of the meet will be called the Blue Ribbon Day and for the events set for that day purses amounting to one thousand dollars have been hung up. The program will include a 2:18 pace for a purse of $400; a 2:35 trot for a purse of $400; a trotting race for two-year-olds for a purse of $100, and a special race for local horses for a purse of $100. SLANGIST FEEDS OUR LANGUAGE

Authority on English Inserts Slang in Dictionary—Harry Thurston Peck's Work.

"Slang is the great feeder of languages," according to Dr. Harry Thurston Peck, formerly Professor of English at Columbia University and editor and author of many books on our language, who has included slang in his latest work just published under the title of "New Websterian 1912 Dictionary, Illustrated."

Dr. Peck believes, however, that a word shall have had the test of several years' usage before it is adopted as a permanent addition to the English vocabulary and in editing the most up-to-date work on English now obtainable he has added many new words not to be found in larger volumes.

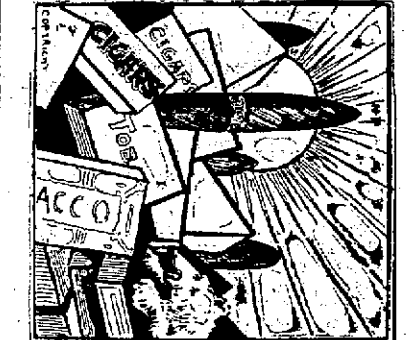

The New Websterian is the "last word" in dictionary compilation, being entirely new from cover to cover, illustrated with plates in color and monotone and containing departments prepared by experts on motoring and aviation.

Some of the slang found in its pages follows: "Mucker," "swell," "snob," "muckraker," "galoot," "gal," "mug," "swipe," "rickety," "bum," "boodel," "touch," "crackerjack," "spizzierink," "boozie." These are only a few of many, but do you know all their meanings? If you don't you need the New Websterian.

By special arrangement with the publishers The Gazette presents it to you for six consecutive coupons and a small expense bonus.

This Dictionary is NOT published by the original publishers of Webster's Dictionary or by their successors.

It has been revised and brought up to the present date, in accordance with the best authorities from the greatest universities, and is published by a well known Publishing Co. of New York City.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

The new party is born and with high sounding title and blare of trumpets Colonel Roosevelt assumes control. The principles announced and the reforms outlined, read well in type, and while many of them are socialistic in tendency, they are harmless, because the American people can be trusted, and radicalism finds it difficult to gain a permanent foothold.

The women of the land, who are clamoring for suffrage, are of course delighted at the recognition granted, while the colored race is disappointed over the treatment received. Regarding the vote of women President Taft said all there was to say when he declared that they should be given the right of suffrage when a majority of them wanted it. In other words, the question should be left to the women to decide.

The world of organized labor will be pleased at the stand the colonel takes when he declares that compensation should be regulated by law, but this does not change the fact that supply and demand have always been and will continue to be the governing factor.

The colonel's speech bristles with theories and lofty ideals. It anticipates an intelligent citizenship, but ignores the fact that the foundation of this intelligence—the public school system—is so weak and defective that it needs reforming more than anything else connected with our national life.

Reformers, who denounce party organization, and urge every man to become an independent voter, and do his own thinking, fail to recognize the fact that ignorance is the prevailing weakness, and that political leadership is as necessary as any other kind of leadership.

The Gazette has long maintained that the public school system is responsible for this widespread ignorance. Just how weak this system is is fully outlined by a writer in the Ladies' Home Journal. She says:

"The most momentous failure in our American life today is the public school, declares Ella Frances Lynch in the pages of the Ladies' Home Journal for August. Not only does the author of this startling statement speak from long experience as a teacher, but she backs her arguments with figures supplied by the United States Commissioner of Education. Briefly stated, the situation to which she challenges the public's attention is this: The whole system of the elementary public school is devised to prepare the pupil for graduation to high school, yet only seven out of every one hundred elementary school pupils enter the high schools. The remaining ninety-three out of every hundred have wasted eight years of their lives, since they emerge from the elementary schools 'fitted for nothing practical.' 'The present idiotic system, which costs over four hundred and three million dollars a year, is either wrongly educating, mal-educating, or absolutely harming nearly eighteen million children every year," asserts Miss Lynch, who goes on to say:

"Can you imagine a more grossly stupid, a more genuinely asinine system tenaciously persisted in to the fearful detriment of over seventeen million children and at a cost to you of over four hundred and three million dollars each year—a system that not only is absolutely ineffective in its results, but also actually harmful in that it throws every year ninety-three out of every one hundred children into the world of action absolutely unfitted for even the simplest tasks in life? Can you wonder that we have so many inefficient men and women; that in so many families there are so many failures; that our boys and girls can make so little money that in the one case they are driven into the saloons for discouragement, and in the other into the brothels to save themselves from starvation? Yet that is exactly what the public school system is today doing, and has been doing."

"She admits that the situation has been slightly mitigated by sporadic attempts in the schools to introduce manual training for boys and domestic science for girls. But these attempts are scattered; they are not sufficiently general to make an impression." Enlarging on this point, she continues:

"Yet wherever these courses have been introduced hundreds of pupils have flocked to them, and in every case these manual training and domestic science courses have been over-crowded. But these courses are again being grafted on; they do not form, as they should, the basis on which the whole idea of public education—which is now not to fit boys and girls for colleges, but for practical life in the world—should rest."

"They are made a branch of the educational tree, whereas they should be made the trunk. This practical idea of a practical fitting of our boys and girls for a practical life should permeate the whole system from top to bottom. Even where it is being introduced it must not be overlooked that it is principally in the high schools, and I have already shown that only seven out of every one hundred boys and girls ever reach the high school. In other words, not a particle of practical education reaches those ninety-three boys and girls who stop at the elementary school and who leave all school at about the age of sixteen."

"To the inefficiency resulting from this system Miss Lynch traces most of our social evils:

"No matter whether we go into the question of the prevailing marital unhappiness, of divorce, of cruelty to children, of the mortality of children, of the saloon, of high prices of the low wages paid to the average person or of the social evil, the root of any one of these questions can be traced straight back to one point: inefficiency; the inefficient girl who does not know how to run her home or care for her baby; the inefficient boy, who, knowing no trade, finds it either hard or impossible to get lucrative work and becomes discouraged. Inefficiency is today the chief curse of American life, and it is because the public school is turning out thousands of inefficient workers: the girl inefficient for the home; the boy inefficient for work."

"While she leaves it to others to find the remedy, she says:

"But one thing must come first, before any suggestions can wisely be made for the re-organization of the public school system: the American parent must fully awaken to the truth that in the American public school he has not something to glory in or be proud of, but a system that is today a shame to America, a system that is antiquated, absolutely out of touch with the times, and, therefore, stupid and wholly ineffective. For every one hundred children it teaches it fails in the case of every nine; three to give the children what they should have and to which they have an indisputable right; a practical preparation for their lives. This the system, as at present conducted, utterly fails to do, and in that respect it is the most momentous and dangerous failure in our American life today."

"In an editorial foreword to Miss Lynch's article, the Ladies' Home Journal promises a series of articles dealing with different phases of the same problem, the next to take up the case of the high school. In the meantime, it has this to say of the general educational situation in this country:

"In all the schools in the United States there are over nineteen million children; a school army representing one-fifth of the entire population of the United States. Nearly eighteen million of these children are in the elementary schools. * * * The real work of education, therefore, must be done in the elementary grades. For every seven students in the higher schools there are ninety-three children in the lower or elementary grades. The proportion is amazing, but these are the facts. So if we wish to educate the American children it is evident that we must go to the primary grades to do it."

"The staggering fact confronts us, therefore, that ninety-three out of every one hundred children never get beyond the elementary or lower grade schools—that they leave school at about the age of fourteen or sixteen years! Is this the public school system, then, that our forefathers dreamed of when they established free education? * * *

"The public school system is intended for all the children of all the people. Yet there are today in America over five million and a half of people absolutely unable to read or write. No, not all negroes and foreigners—two-thirds are negroes and foreigners, but one million and a half

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

By ROY K. MOULTON.

From The Hickeyville Clarion.

Grandpa Bibbins must be about the oldest feller in this state. He says he kin remember when there wasn't no dorky hats.

Len Higgins, who came back from the west this week, says there ain't no town like old Hickeyville after all, and I guess, by golly, that there ain't. At least, there ain't none just like it.

Uncle Ezra Harkins says he's got a lot of distant relatives. They must have been borryin' money from him. Miss Euphemia Perkins, our potess of passion, who is one of the greatest unknown poetesses in this country, expects to add a contribution to the Immense number of Titanic poems just as soon as she kin find time from her duties as second cook at the Huttel. She expects, like all of the rest, to make "Titanic" rhyme with "panic."

I never yet went into a grocery store that I didn't see a kerosene can settin' on the floor with a pointer stuck on its snoot. I will never believe the millennium is at hand until the grovers begin to put the best berries in the bottom of the box and the green ones on top.

Mr. Amariah Tinker, the eminent horseologist and apostle of the veterinary science, has discovered the rather remarkable fact that a mule cannot omit a sound from his mouth if you tie his tail to his hind leg or weight it down with a fifty-pound block of iron. The doctor has been making some valuable experiments along this line during the last few weeks, which have been fraught with dire peril. Before he proved the fact that a mule cannot sing when his tail is tied down he suffered five broken ribs and had to pick himself up out of an adjacent cornfield several times. In fact, nearly everything he had was broken excepting his neck and his dollar watch, which kept on ticking under the most strenuous circumstances. But the doctor says he is amply repaid by the knowledge that he has given the world a great truth. The pursuit of science ever has its sacrifices.

Mrs. Prunella Fandy has invented a new method of getting rid of the festive yet pestiferous mosquito during the summer months. She has combined some chemicals which, if injected into the neck of the mosquito with a hypodermic syringe, instantly and permanently dulls the sensibilities of the animal. All that is necessary to do is to catch the mosquito, inject the chemical, and while the mosquito is in a comatose condition, go out in the woodshed and get a club or the ax and end the animal's life.

I remember, I remember,
The town hall where I spoke
When I was graduated
From education's yoke.

I remember, I remember,
'Twas many years ago;
I knew right then most surely
All that there was to know.

I remember, I remember,
I wore a hard-boiled shirt;
Also my first white necktie
And white kid gloves that hurt.

I remember, I remember,
I had a mighty theme,
To save the world from ruin,
That was my fondest dream.

I remember, I remember,
The problems of the time
Were solved by me that evening
In language most sublime.

I remember, I remember,
I pictured out success,
Though where I got my knowledge,
Nobody there could guess.

I remember, I remember,
I was the whole cream cheese;
Marc Anthony I fided,
Also Demosthenes.

I remember, I remember,
I left the hall that night,
And started out that instant
To set the world aright.

That was back in the distance,
How far I most forget,
The world was on serenely,
I haven't changed it yet.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

ADJUSTMENT.

A great misfortune comes to you. Like most misfortunes, it comes unexpectedly.

The unexpected happens to us all. Because unforeseen the joy is severe. Surprise mingles with suffering. Such things may happen to others, of course. But to you? That's different! Why, this is monstrous. You say you cannot endure the affliction.

And yet—
In the very hour your soul rises to the emergency and you begin to adjust yourself to the new situation. Every effort is made to fit your future to the changed conditions. Little by little you adapt yourself. Little by little you are reconciled. The burden is yet on, but you have adjusted the harness so you can bear it. It galls you some, but not as at first. Merciful faculty!

A great sorrow, a heartbreaking bereavement comes, and the violent blow staggers you. Passing bells ring the world over, and mourners go about the street, but you do not mourn—till now! You can "never be happy again." Life must be nothing.

Nevertheless—
Even while your pain cries out the inner forces are being marshaled for a defense against despair. There is a slow but sure readjustment that permits you to go on, though it may be sorrowfully at first and fearfully.

As you grow accustomed to the load it grows lighter. You keenly realize, of course, that you never can be quite the same as before. You have been chastened into something different. The scar will always remind you. But—
You are still you!

Through it all you have preserved the identity of your being. You have passed under the rod and have undergone experiences you did not dream you should undergo. But—

By and by you begin to realize that even pain and sorrow and losses and wounds have their compensation; that you cannot be exempt from the common lot; that you must fight the battle of life as a good soldier; that you have been preserved for a good purpose.

Gradually life again becomes worth the living. As the eye, passing from the bright sunlight into sudden darkness, gradually adapts itself, so does the soul of man adapt itself to the new environment.

Blessed is the power that inheres in us to make readjustment. Without it we should always be children crying in the night.

DINNER FOR TWO

Jobson and his wife were enjoying a stroll along the quiet country road. The footpath was extremely narrow, and Jobson, of course, was more off it than n. Thus, when the motor car rushed around the corner, poor old Jobson got it in the small of his back. The owner of the car jumped off to render assistance, and the injured man was hurried to the nearest doctor's. But the case was hopeless.

"Forgive me, old man," said the penitent motorist. "Can I make any reparation?"

"Yes," he whispered. "Are you married?"

"Engaged?"

"No."

"Well, as you will be responsible for making my wife a widow, will you marry her?"

"Certainly," replied the motorist, with a catch in his voice. "And I shall care for and protect her as long as I live."

Jobson sank back with a sigh of content, and murmured to himself: "Revenge is sweet!"

Bird S. Coler, who was Greater New York's first controller, was nominated for Governor of New York by the Democrats in 1902.

Mr. Coler is deeply interested in religious work, and three days after his nomination he was scheduled to address an afternoon meeting of the Y. M. C. A. in Brooklyn. The other speaker was Frank Harvey Field, an ardent Republican.

It was the practice of these meetings for each speaker to lead in the singing of a hymn as a preface to his remarks. When Mr. Field got up he announced: "We shall now sing hymn number 316—'Throw out the life-line; some one is drifting away.'"

The audience looked at Coler and everybody grinned—that is, everybody but Coler, who was entirely serious.

After Field had finished it was Coler's turn. He advanced to the edge of the platform and was loudly applauded. He turned the pages of his hymnal rapidly and, after the handclapping had subsided, announced cheerfully: "We will sing that beautiful hymn: 'When the roll is called up yonder I'll be there.'"

To this day he hasn't understood the roar of laughter that followed.

Chicago, Aug. 19.—Quiet, prevailed today at the progressive party headquarters. Nearly all of the leaders with the exception of U. S. Sen. Dixon of Montana had left the city. SAMUEL C. COBB DIED EARLY THIS MORNING

PASSED AWAY AT HIS HOME ON JACKMAN STREET AFTER A LONG ILLNESS.

PROMINENT RESIDENT

Served Through Civil War—Mayor of City—Director in Bank—Connected With Janesville Machine Company Which He Helped Organize.

This morning, shortly after nine, the spirit of Samuel C. Cobb, for many years one of Janesville's most prominent citizens, passed to the world beyond after an illness that had extended over weeks. For several days past all hopes of his recovery had been given up and the end came peacefully, as though he but fell asleep to wake in the world beyond.

With the death of Mr. Cobb, Janesville loses another of its older citizens who have been closely identified with its progress during the past half century or more. His death closes a career that has left its lasting impression upon the city and the business institutions that he has been connected with during his long business life.

A veteran of the Civil War, former mayor of the city, one of the early organizers of the Janesville Machine company, earlier known as the Harris Works, and for many years its active head, Mr. Cobb played an important part in the civic and business world of the city. A man of sterling character, he was known and loved by all his employees and his integrity in business affairs gave him a place in affairs of both private and public affairs not often attained by a citizen.

Samuel Chamberlain Cobb was born August 16, 1836, in Albany, Vermont. His parents, however, soon moved to Rockton, and shortly afterward to Pittsburg, Mass., where his boyhood days were spent. Mr. Cobb came west to this city about the year 1859, settling in Janesville, which has since been his home.

He entered the Budd Novelty Works on arriving here, and remained there until the year 1866, when he entered the Harris-Piffard company and was one of the members of the board of directors, the other members being James Harris, E. G. Piffard, Leavitt Piffard and Horace Dewey.

In 1869, the Harris Manufacturing company was incorporated, Mr. Cobb being one of the founders. He was also made one of the directors of this company. The Harris Manufacturing company was succeeded in 1881 by the Janesville Machine company and besides being elected to the directors' board, Mr. Cobb became superintendent of the plant. He held this position until 1904 when he became purchasing agent, but about a year ago relinquished his work for less active duties about the company's factory. Since the organization of the Janesville Machine company Mr. Cobb had been one of its directors.

Mr. Cobb, in addition to his interests in the manufacturing industries of the city, was a director of the First National bank from Jan. 1894, to Jan. 1898. He was again elected a director in May, 1906, and served until his death.

In 1861, at the outbreak of the Civil war, Mr. Cobb enlisted in the army and went out with Company A of this city, or the Ruger Guards, in the Thirtieth Regiment. The regiment was mustered into the service October 17, 1861, with Mr. Cobb as orderly sergeant in his company. He was promoted Aug. 11, 1863, to second lieutenant and October 13, 1863, to first lieutenant. He became captain of the company, Nov. 21, 1864. In October, 1865, he was made major of the regiment, and was in command when the regiment returned to Wisconsin.

When the W. H. Sargent Post, G. A. R., was organized in this city, Mr. Cobb was one of those who took part in its organization, and he served as its first commander. He was re-elected commander a number of times, and has taken a prominent part in the affairs of the post.

In 1870, Mr. Cobb was elected mayor of the city of Janesville and served a term of two years.

He was married in 1857 in Janesville, to Miss Louisa Ash. She passed away in this city May 1, 1898. Two children were born to them—Joseph, who died in 1876, and Miss Gertrude Cobb. He was married a second time to Mrs. Jennie M. Weidensall on April 21, 1910. Besides the widow and the daughter, Mr. Cobb is survived by a brother, J. Frank Cobb of Ashbury Park, N. J., and a sister, Mrs. Walter A. Standish of East Orange.

Mr. Cobb was a member of the Congregational church in this city. He was also a member of Janesville Lodge No. 55, F. & A. M., and Janesville Chapter No. 5, R. A. M.

The funeral will be held Tuesday afternoon at the Congregational church.

LABOR DAY AFFAIR WILL BE BIG EVENT

Rockford Unions Decide to Come Here Rather Than to Aurora—Program Ready Soon.

One of the biggest celebrations ever held in Janesville is being planned by the local carpenters' union together with the unions in Beloit and Rockford for Labor day. CONSENT TO REDUCE STREET ASSESSMENT

City Council Lightens Burden Upon Washington Street Residents for Improvements to Be Made.

After hearing the protests of the property owners and in view of the peculiar situation surrounding the work of improving Washington street from Mineral Point avenue to the city limits, the council believes that the general fund should be charged with a greater amount than was reported in the final report of the board of public works, submitted July 15, and at its meeting yesterday resolved to make a further reduction of ten per cent in the amount of assessment chargeable to the abutting property and charge it to the general fund. The council also accepted the final plans and specifications for the improvement of Washington street from Milwaukee avenue to Madison street to Garfield avenue, and work will be begun within a very short time.
The board of public works' report on the amount due the Central States Bridge company on its estimate of Aug. 9, was accepted and the city clerk was directed to draw an order for $2,500 in its favor, this being payment for construction.
The report of the city stone crusher for the period from July 22 to Aug. 6, showed an output of 265 cubic yds. of the greater part of which was used by Gunt, Graham and company. This report, together with that of the municipal court for the month of July were approved and accepted.
City Attorney W. H. Dougherty was directed by the council to take up the matter of effecting a settlement with the Chicago & Northwestern railway for damages to the city street sweepers at the North Academy street crossing.

SECRET OF SUCCESS BY MARVIN HUGHITT

Northwestern Railroad Magnate Declares One Must Know Men to Advance—Passes Seventy-Fifth Birthday.

There is not an employee of the Northwestern road in Janesville who does not have the highest esteem for Marvin Hughitt even though the knowledge he may have of the head of that great system is but hearsay. There are many men in this city, however, who are acquainted with him and have the highest regard for his ability and judgment.
It has been said that consistency is his middle name. He reveals it by day and dreams by night of new outrages against the natural law and order of things. If he were scheduled to take the trip with Aaron tomorrow morning he would either go tonight or wait until tomorrow afternoon, charter a scow and navigate the Styx by himself.

Praises His Men.

He has made a dozen or more millions out of his inconsistencies. With him they are marketable commodities with fixed values. His aptitude for the unexpected rescued him from the turmoil of a farmer's life and left him serene and satisfied at the head of a railroad system of some 9,000 miles of track and $200,000,000 of assets.
This man—his name just happens to be Marvin Hughitt—spent his 27,333rd day being exactly as consistent as he has been throughout the other 27,332.

"I don't see why any one should be interested in my birthday anniversary," said Mr. Hughitt yesterday at his summer home in Lake Forest. "Why do they keep reminding me that I am getting so close to the end of my rope?"

"You know, I have a confession to make, and my birthday anniversary is a good time to make it. Really, I don't deserve half the credit I have been given for the remarkable success of the Northwestern Railroad."

"I'll tell you the honest truth. It wasn't I who did it. It was the small army of efficient and faithful men I had around me."

Builder, Not a Gambler.

Hughitt is not of the Hawley or Harriman type of railroad magnates. He was essentially a builder, never a gambler. His life has been one of constant and steady growth, with none of the great successes and failures which left both those others bent and seared.

He is as straight as an Indian, alert and handsome as any few men at his age. His health is perfect and he has more fun living than most men at half his age.

The folks expected him to stay at home and make something of a celebration of the event. Instead he went to the office, intent upon running the railroad. But everybody at the office seemed to expect him so he decided to go calling on friends in Oak Park.

The chauffeur went by the Northwestern station twenty miles an hour, expecting to go to Oak Park. Mr. Hughitt changed his mind and caught the 12:30 for Lake Forest. There he donned the most precise clothes he could find in the wardrobe—such as J. Hamilton Lewis would wear if he were to be inaugurated President of the United States—and took his place on the veranda of his country home to commune with nature.

He has been president of the Northwestern since 1887. He wanted to quit active service ten years ago, but each year the newspapers would crop out with stories a few days prior to the annual meeting to the effect that he would retire.

"I'll be darned if I do," he would chortle, and then wait until the calendar swung around in the hope that the newspapers would let him do what he wanted. He expected and retired suddenly. In sheer desperation he turned the keys of his office over to William A. Gardner two years ago and took a softer berth as chairman of the board of directors.

Marvin Hughitt began being a railroad boss at the age of fifteen. True, he was but a telegraph operator in a way station at the time, but he was boss of all the property for two miles in each direction. Before he was big enough to use a razor he was bossing the telegraph system of the old Chicago & St. Louis Railroad, now the Chicago & Alton.

Prefers the Caboose.

Did you ever hear of a railroad paying the wage earner and the common people any more for right of way than the means of travel in the district would prescribe? No? Well, Marvin Hughitt didn't like the prices which the courts fixed for property condemned for the building of the great terminal station and said so where the court could hear it.

Marvin Hughitt said that the property was valuable because the new terminal would make it so and proceeded to wear out a fountain pen writing checks for sums varying from $10,000 to $40,000 and mailed them to those whom he believed the courts had cheated. He deliberately and of his own free will gave away something like $200,000 to make sure that he wasn't cheating anybody.

He has a private car just as smart and pretty as Mrs. Putnam's, but he would rather ride in the caboose. He knows half the station agents and conductors on the line by their first names and initials, and the only reason he doesn't know the rest is that faces change rapidly in two years with a big railroad system.

INVITE GOVERNOR WILSON TO WATERWAYS CONVENTION

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Seagirt, Aug. 10.—Members of the New Jersey commission attached to the Atlantic Deep Waterways association called at the governor's cottage today. They wanted the governor to attend the national convention of their association in New London, Conn., on September 4, to Pres. Taft they said had already accepted an invitation to speak Sept. 6. The governor responded through his secretary that his speaking engagements now were in the hands of his campaign committee and that he would give no definite answer.

NICHOLS DEFEATED IN CLOSE CONTEST

Janesville Man Fails at Election of Grand Trustee of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

By a very narrow margin John C. Nichols, of this city, was defeated for the office of Grand Trustee, at the Eagles election of officers at the convention which closes today at Cleveland. Mr. Nichols went down in defeat with the rest of the ticket which was opposed by the victorious so-called organization clique. The officers elected were:

Grand worthy president—William J. Brennan, Pittsburgh.
Grand worthy vice president—Thomas J. Gogan, Cincinnati.
Grand worthy secretary—John S. Parry, San Francisco.
Grand worthy treasurer—F. K. Hughes, Yonkers, N. Y.
Grand worthy conductor—Thomas P. Gleason, Minneapolis.

Grand worthy trustees—James F. Kelley, Cleveland; Conrad H. Mann, Kansas City; John J. Bohl, Stamford, Conn.; and Fred S. Naeve, Davenport, Iowa.

The degree team of the aerle of Worcester, Mass., won first prize, $1,000, in the competition before the grand aerle on Friday. To the Indianapolis team fell second place and $500. Milwaukee team which marched here in the parade at the state encampment took third place and $250.

The grand aerle so amended the order the services of an aerle physician for any illness brought about through the use of intoxicating liquor or by immoral conduct.

No aerle shall be permitted to establish a buffet until its charter shall have been in force a year, the grand aerle decided, and then only upon application to the grand aerle of at least two-thirds of the aerle membership.

Many of the thousands attending the convention left on Friday. Today the grand aerle held its concluding session, a feature of which will be the installation of the officers elected. "They steam-rolled me," said Mr. Nichols, who returned from Cleveland this morning. "They wanted to run me for national chairman on the machine ticket, but I preferred to run independent as grand trustee. I received a fine vote from the members as individuals and as much as the man who won out, but according to the rules of the grand aerle the vote is by membership, each lodge being allowed one vote per hundred members. The organization had the larger lodges."

Hugh Joyce Jr., who was also at the grand aerle meeting, has gone to Buffalo, New York, and will visit there before returning to this city.

NUCLEUS FOR A ZOO IS OFFERED TO CITY

George S. Parker Would Donate a Washington Bear Cub for This Purpose.

If Janesville wishes to organize a zoological garden, George S. Parker will make the first donation, a handsome black Washington bear cub. Several years ago William Appleby, John Brown, and Ralph VanCleave, purchased two little bear cubs and had them in a cage near the city hall for some months. At that time there was considerable talk of organizing a Zoo, but beyond receiving a few promises of contributions nothing definite was done about it and the plan was dropped. Since then Madison has started a Zoo and several other cities have done likewise and it is possible that Janesville might like to be placed upon the state map in this direction. Mr. Parker offers the bear, which is described as a cub and a great pet, if the city will care for it. Here is an opportunity and the Gazette will be glad to receive suggestions relative to the matter for publication.

Mr. Parker's offer of the cub is the result of a proposition made to him by a dealer in the northern part of the state who wishes to trade the bear cub and some money for a case of fountain pens. The following letter explains the proposition more thoroughly.

Pardeeville, Wis., Aug. 9, 1912.
George S. Parker—
Dear Sir: Here's a proposition. I have a Washington black bear cub, tame, and a dandy. I will trade you the cub for your three dozen assortment and send you $10.21 in cash. That will start me in the Parker pen business and give you a cub whose head will be worth $50.00 when grown. She is the attraction here. Respectfully,
R. W. LANGDON.

I make this early announcement at the request of my friends because there are other candidates already in the field and I wish my friends to know of my candidacy at this time for that reason.

Guardsmen

ALEXANDRE DUMAS

His eminence went to the chamber which served him as a closet and made a sign to Rochefort to bring in the young musketeer. Rochefort obeyed and retired.

"Monsieur," said the cardinal, "you have been arrested by my orders. Do you know why?"

"No, monseigneur, for the only thing for which I could be arrested is still unknown to your eminence. If monseigneur will have the goodness to tell me in the first place what crimes are imputed to me I will then tell your eminence what I have really done."

"You are charged with having corresponded with the enemies of the kingdom. You are charged with having surprised state secrets. You are charged with having endeavored to thwart the plans of your general."

"And who charges me with this, monseigneur?" said D'Artagnan. "A woman branded by the justice of the country, who attempted both to poison and assassinate me!"

"What is all this, monseigneur?" cried the cardinal, astonished. "And what woman are you speaking of thus?"

"Of Mlle. de Winter," replied D'Artagnan. "Yes, of Mlle. de Winter, of whose crimes your eminence is doubtless ignorant because you have honored her with your confidence. But she is punished, monseigneur."

"And who has punished her?"

"We have."

"Is she in prison?"

"She is dead. Three times she attempted to kill me, and I pardoned her, but she murdered the woman I loved. Then my friends and I took her, tried her and condemned her."

D'Artagnan then related the story. A shudder crept through the body of the cardinal. But all at once, as if negating the influence of a secret thought, the countenance of the cardinal, till that moment gloomy, cleared up by degrees and recovered perfect serenity.

"So," said the cardinal, in a tone that contrasted strongly with the severity of his words, "you have constituted yourselves judges, without remembering that they who punish without license to punish are assassins?"

"Monseigneur, I do not hold life dear enough to be afraid of death. Another might reply that he had his pardon in his pocket. I will content myself with saying: Issue your orders of condemnation, monseigneur. I am ready."

"Your pardon?" said Richelieu, surprised. "Signed by whom? By the king?"

"No; by your eminence. Monseigneur will doubtless recognize his own writing."

And D'Artagnan presented to the cardinal the precious piece of paper which Athos had forced from him.

It is by my order and for the good of the state that the bearer of this has done what he has done. RICHELIEU. Dec. 3, 1627.

The cardinal after having read these two lines sank into a profound reverie, but he did not return the paper to D'Artagnan. At length he raised his head, fixed his eagle look upon that loyal, open and intelligent countenance, read upon that face, furrowed with tears, all the suffering he had endured in the course of the last month and reflected for the third or fourth time how much that youth of twenty-one years of age had before him and what resources his activity, his courage and his shrewd understanding might offer to a good master. The crimes and the "Monsieur," said he, "my life is yours."

Internal genius of Mlle. de Winter had more than once terrified him. He felt something like a secret joy at having got rid of this dangerous accomplice.

He slowly tore the paper which D'Artagnan had generously placed in his hand. Then he went to the table and, without sitting down, wrote a few lines upon a parchment of which two-thirds was already filled up and affixed his seal to it.

"Here, monsieur," said the cardinal to the young man; "I have taken from you one signed blank to give you another. The name is wanting in this commission; you can write it yourself."

D'Artagnan took the paper hesitatingly and cast his eyes over it. It was a lieutenant's commission in the musketeers.

D'Artagnan fell at the feet of the cardinal. "Monsieur," said he, "my life is yours; henceforward dispose of it. But I have three friends who are more meritorious and more worthy!"

"You are a brave youth, D'Artagnan. Do with this commission what you will, only remember that, though the name be a blank, it was to you that I gave it, Rochefort!"

The chevalier entered immediately.

"Rochefort," said the cardinal, "you see M. D'Artagnan. I receive him among the number of my friends. Embrace, then, and be prudent if you have any wish to preserve your heads."

Rochefort and D'Artagnan saluted coolly, but the cardinal was there observing them with his vigilant eye.

They left the chamber at the same time.

"We shall meet again, shall we not, monsieur?"

"When you please," said D'Artagnan, and they parted.

"We were beginning to grow impatient," said Athos.

"Well, here I am, my friends," replied D'Artagnan, "not only free, but in favor."

He related all that had taken place between the cardinal and himself and, drawing the commission from his pocket, "Here, my dear Athos," said he; "this belongs to you naturally."

"My friend," said Athos, "for Athos this is too much; for the Count de la Fere it is too little. Keep the commission. It is yours. Alas, you have purchased it dearly enough."

"Here, my friend," said D'Artagnan to Porthos; "write your name upon this and become my officer."

Porthos cast his eyes over the commission and returned it to D'Artagnan.

"Yes," said he, "yes, but I should not have time enough to enjoy the distinction. During our expedition to Reims the husband of my duchess died, so that, my dear friend, I shall marry the widow. No; keep the lieutenantcy, my dear fellow, keep it." And he returned the commission to D'Artagnan.

The young man then offered the commission to Aramis.

"Alas, my dear friend," said Aramis, "our late adventures have disgusted me with life and with a sword. This time my determination is irrevocably taken. After the siege I shall enter the house of the Lazarists. Keep the commission, D'Artagnan. The profession of arms suits you. You will be a brave and adventurous captain."

THE END.

La Rochelle, deprived of the assistance of the English fleet and of the reinforcements promised by Buckingham, surrendered after a siege of a year. On the 25th of October, 1623, the capitulation was signed.

D'Artagnan took possession of his rank. Porthos left the service and in the course of the following year married Mme. Comenard. The so much coveted officer contained 500,000 livres. Mousqueton became his factotum.

Aramis took the habit in a convent of Nancy. Bazile became a lay brother.

Athos remained a musketeer under the command of D'Artagnan till the year 1631, when he also quitted the service under the pretext of having inherited a small property in Roussillon. Grimaud followed Athos.

D'Artagnan fought three times with Rochefort and wounded him at each encounter. At length they embraced heartily and without retaining any malice.

Planchet obtained from Rochefort the rank of sergeant in the guards.

M. Bonacieux lived on very quietly, perfectly ignorant what had become of his wife and caring very little about the matter. One day he had the imprudence to intrude himself upon the memory of the cardinal. The cardinal had him informed that he would provide for him so that he should never want for anything in future. In fact, M. Bonacieux, having left his house at 7 o'clock in the evening to go to the Louvre, never appeared again in the Rue des Fossoyeurs, and the opinion of those who seemed to be the best informed was that he was fed and lodged in some royal castle at the expense of his generous eminence.

THE END.

Even Then.

Captain Kidd—"What's the trouble? Can't you make the prisoner walk the plank?" Lieutenant—"No, Cap; he absolutely refuses to be a part of the spectacle unless we guarantee him a percentage of the moving-picture receipts."—Puck.

WORLD'S FINEST HERD OF SHETLAND PONIES BRED AND RAISED ON A ROCK COUNTY FARM

ROBERT LILBURN, EMERALD GROVE FARM, HAS WON DISTINCTION AS RAISER OF THESE BEAUTIFUL CHILDREN'S PETS.

EXPORTED TO ENGLAND

First Shipment of Ponies From This Country to British Islands Was Made From This Farm Last Spring.

One always associates the home of the Shetland pony with the highlands of Scotland, or the bleak shores of the Shetland Isles, with the wind blowing and the sturdy, shaggy little beasts trotting to the crags and peeping over just as you have seen them in story books years ago.

Sturdy, intelligent little beasts they are. Strong and willing, kind and gentle, fit playmates for children and unfailing amount within the past few years. There has not been the interest taken in breeding and there has been absolutely no money or profit in raising ponies on the islands where they first thrived and gained their world-wide reputation. In fact, the business was kept up only through the efforts and interest of wealthy gentlemen in England who found it necessary to ship over fodder and grain to keep their droves during the winter, that the business has continued at all.

What few ponies are now bred on the other side of the water are raised on the English estates and there are practically no farms where the entire attention is devoted to pony breeding. As a result there is a scarcity of stock and the dealers naturally turned toward America to obtain their supply for the still popular demand for these finest of all children's pets. Mr. Lilburn has always been in touch with the English market and has carried on correspondence with breeders and dealers for years. He has replenished his droves with the will be used to feed the ponies this winter. It is very seldom that Mr. Lilburn finds it necessary to buy feed. It is his plan to raise it all, but for eight months, at least, his droves harvest their own living from the fertile pastures. Mr. Lilburn stated that he could keep six ponies on the same amount of feed that would be required to keep one cow.

It is a beautiful sight indeed to look over the rolling pasture field and see the droves of ponies quietly grazing. The fields are almost free from trees except for numerous Hawthorn hedges in the pastures nearest the farm house. In these the mares with the colts are kept and the hedges offer shade and protection.

The points are graded and divided according to a well devised plan and the animals of one grade are put in the same pasture. In one large lot are several hundred male animals that are being kept for sale during the coming fall. In another are the mares and their colts, and in still another are the younger mares. Each pony has a strap around its neck and the straps carry the special mark of each pony for identification by the owner.

Although he keeps strict record of each pony on his books Mr. Lilburn actually does not know how many ponies he has. He has never counted from Chicago and the east. New York and Boston and the main market centers for his product and agents come out every year to pick out their ponies for the eastern trade. They are shipped in car-load lots. Only to neighbors and friends living near him does he sell single ponies.

His droves supply all kinds and sizes of ponies. Most of them are either black or bay as to color, however he has many beautiful little pets of light color, some spotted white and black, white and sand and other combinations. As to height, they range from the smallest one at 23 inches to the larger ponies nearly 50 inches high. For his exportation this spring the English buyer would take nothing over 32 inches. The demand for England and Scotland being for ponies under that figure. However, in the United States the demand varies and larger sized ponies find as ready sale as the medium sized ones. A recent issue of the "Horse World" has the following to say of Mr. Lilburn's herds:

"While the master of Emerald Grove believes a Shetland should have the conformation of a miniature draft horse to enable him to perform the service demanded of him for use in the harness, the number of high-class show animals which have come from his herd is little short of remarkable, a fact that shows that the principles on which he founded his herd were sound ones.

"Shires of the highest merit have always headed the herd at Emerald Grove. Trinket Jr. champion stallion of the World's Fair in Chicago, now 23 years old, is still hale and hearty and still retains the beauty of form and true Shetland type that made him notable in the show ring and in the stud. His son Spotwood, a most beautiful stallion, will succeed him when he finally passes away."

Mr. Lilburn now has on his farm a Shetland mare over thirty years old which he brought with him on his first shipment from England. She is beginning to show signs of age but still bears the true Shetland features. She has been a valuable animal in her day and is dear to her master and to the younger ponies with which she feeds. Every one of the ponies is fully domesticated; none are wild and are quite familiar even with strangers. They are attractive, loving little animals and can not fail to bring cries of delight from the children and tender caresses from the grown-ups.

Mrs. Lilburn is quite familiar with the business of raising the Shetlands and takes as active an interest in it as does her husband. They have lived to see their efforts bear fruit and are justly proud of their herds. They take personal joy and pleasure in each little animal and can recognize their favorite in the midst of a large herd. The little fellows flock about them at their call and follow them as would a herd of sheep follow its shepherd.

With such an extensive farm and business one would imagine that con-

DIETETICS VS. MEDICINE.

"In the progress of medicine," says Dr. Wiley, "the near future, in my opinion, will see the professorship of dietetics advanced to the same rank as that of medicine. The practice of medicine in the future will be largely the practice of dietetics." Most medical practitioners admit that in many chronic cases in which medicine is of little or no value skillful dietetic treatment accomplishes most successful results. Drugs accomplish quick results in acute cases, but the results obtained by diet are permanent. The constant and far-reaching influence of diet in the causation of disease is now generally admitted, and it must follow that diet can have an equally potent influence in the cure of disease, and as this becomes generally recognized the demand for dietetic treatment will be supplied by properly qualified practitioners.

companions for others, who love animal nature. Only always think of them as coming directly from the far off shores of Scotland or the tiny isles that surround this nation, and but few realize that with eight miles of Janesville, the largest herd in the world is to be found.

Not only the largest herd but also the first herd, from which the English and Scotch buyers of these particular animals, in America, have come thousands of miles to visit and select choice animals to rejuvenate their depleted herds at home.

Wherever Shetland ponies are known to buyers, the name of Robert Lilburn and his Emerald Grove Farm are talked of. With its rolling hills, and thousand acres that compose his farm, are found most ideal grazing grounds for the dainty little beasts and here the hundreds of ponies are born and grow to maturity to be shipped to all parts of the country.

best blood from the English and Shetland Island herds and has visited many of the farmers and dealers personally. It appears that the reputation of his stock raised on the Emerald Grove Farm is now firmly established in the English market as well in the eastern part of the United States.

The magnitude of the scale in which the raising of these charming and captivating animals is carried on, can only be realized by an actual visit to the pastures and paddocks. About 1,000 acres compose the large farm which is located on high ground, gently rolling and sloping, affording the best possible grazing land. All but several hundred acres is fenced off into pasture lots, from forty to eighty acres in size, where the various droves of ponies feed during the entire summer.

Some of the pasture fields are allowed to lay unoccupied for a part of the season, and when the other ed them to know the absolute total. Over a hundred colts are born each year and his sales vary. This has been an exceptional season for sales which already have amounted to nearly 150 head.

Mr. Lilburn came to this country from Scotland with his father some sixty years ago. After his father's death about twenty years ago he went to Scotland and made his first shipment of ponies, of the pure breed form the Scotland Islands, with which to start his pony breeding business. There were about eighty ponies in all. Since then he has many frequent importations and this year marks his first export, in fact the first export of Shetlands from the United States.

There is no other farm in the world where the entire business is devoted to the raising of ponies alone on such a large scale. In this country there are several farms in Ohio and New Jersey where ponies are bred to quite an extent but none of them have the large number, or the fine quality, or the amount of farming and grazing land that Mr. Lilburn has. Some men who have started into the pony business began with too small an amount of capital and after they had bought a small drove and secured their land they had no money left to exploit, and they soon went out of business because people did not know about siderable extra help would be needed. But this is not the case. Mr. Lilburn manages remarkably well with the minimum amount of help and gives every detail his personal attention. In fact he says that he has found a business which he can conduct in an extensive manner without employing a large amount of help. He has in this way solved for himself one of the problems of modern life and he points to the fact that farmers everywhere are confining their sphere of labor to that work which they can accomplish themselves without hired help.

In spite of the fact that they are very busy people at the Emerald Grove Farm, they receive and entertain a large number of visitors in the course of a week and always delight in showing them the delightful little Shetlands. Their farm is truly a marvel and one could spend hours and

TRINKET, JR., WORLD'S FAIR CHAMPION, HEAD OF EMERALD GROVE HERD.

It is an undertaking right at our own doors that we have always credited to a foreign shore.

To Robert Lilburn belongs the honor of making the first exportation of Shetland ponies from this country to England. Eighty animals, the choicest of his droves, were bought by an English firm, T. and I. Maughan and Company, and were shipped to Newcastle during the month of June last. An advertisement in a recent publication of The Scotsman, of Edinburgh, announces the sale of this lot of ponies, described as the finest lot that could be found anywhere.

This will not be the only exportation from this country, however, if present indications may be credited. Another English gentleman, now traveling in Texas and the southwest, visited the Emerald Grove Farm early in the spring and stated that he would doubtless take a shipment of ponies as soon as he could get the choice he wanted.

Mr. Lilburn has had letters from other buyers and dealers in England and Scotland and all speak in the highest terms of the quality of his ponies. One man at Aberdeen, declared that in his mind there was little doubt that Mr. Lilburn's stock was the best in America and probably in the world. He said that he hoped to come to the United States, accepting Mr. Lilburn's invitation to visit his farm, within the near future.

It is the fact that these English dealers recognize the superiority of Emerald Grove Farm animals that leads to the conclusion that he has the best lot of ponies in the world. As a matter of fact the stock on the Shetland islands has deteriorated an lots become closely cropped, the ponies are turned into the idle fields and the old grazing land is given several months' rest. In this way there is plenty of feed for the little fellows all summer. During the winter they are fed from open sheds and allowed to run outside as much as they may be inclined. A small ration of corn and grain is also given them and the hardy little beasts thrive surprisingly well. Two hundred acres of hay were cut this summer and the entire amount put up them and they did not have ponies enough to offer an attraction to the large dealers.

Practically all of Mr. Lilburn's sales are made to the large buyers

The Home Beautiful

DESIGN NO. 57

This handsome bungalow stands in a class by itself, having large commodious rooms with two chambers on each floor. The pantry is again having cupboards along the entire end and the work table with flour-bin and drawers underneath, occupying the space at the side under the window. The kitchen contains besides the sink, a large cupboard for pots and pans, just beside the range. The central Hall arrangement is ideal, as every room on the first floor is entered from it except the Dining Room, and that could be done by sacrificing one of the closets, of which there are two. The buffet in the Dining Room snugly ensconced in the corner by the Mantel, sets off the room to good advantage, and with the sliding panel to the kitchen adds to the convenience of the house. The brick mantel flanked on either side by window seats makes the end of the living room a veritable cozy corner, while the inside cellarway is reached through a passage connected with the Hall. All Chambers are provided with large closets on both floors, and we must not overlook that important adjunct, the Bath Room at the head of the stairs.

The Dining Room, Living Room and Hall are finished in oak with oak floors. The remainder of the house in yellow pine, except Bath Room which will be white enamel with oak floor. Plastering is Grand Rapids Plaster Co.'s hard plaster, sand finished tinted in the last coat to suit. Width 42 feet 6 inches, length 38 feet 2 inches.

Cost to build using first-class material and workmanship, $4,000.00.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

CAN YOU LAUGH?

CAN you laugh? Just about once in so often I am newly impressed with the enormous value of a good laugh as a social asset.

My most recent lesson in this matter was given me by one of those mushroom acquaintances which we all make in vacation days. She was a rather plain woman with no particular recommendation except that ability to laugh, often, at the proper time, and extremely well. And by "well" I don't mean musically, but simply with an appearance of hearty enjoyment and appreciation.

Without the laugh she would have been commonplace. With it she shortly became one of the most popular women in the hotel. Everyone said to everyone else, "What a jolly woman Mrs. S. is. How much interest she takes in everyone. What a pleasure it is to talk to her." New-comers, especially, were delighted with her.

At first I, too, was among the enthusiasts, but in two or three weeks I—like many others—got under the laugh, found that the heartiness was only a mask, and that the reality beneath the mask was rather more cold and selfish than the average. But whoever failed her, there were always plenty of new arrivals to meet the lady, fall beneath the spell of the laugh and go about saying, "What a jolly woman Mrs. S. is," etc.

Now please consider what an asset that laugh was. It successfully concealed coldness and self-interest; it won constant popularity for an otherwise commonplace woman; it made infinitely more friends for her in a season than many genuinely cordial men and women find in a lifetime.

Now I am sure some of my readers are wondering what I mean by praising such a woman. Perhaps they are saying, "I wouldn't be such a hypocrite for anything."

Nobody wants you to be hypocrites, my friends.

And I am not praising the woman. I am simply praising the laugh.

I am taking it for granted that you are one of the genuinely cordial folks, and, therefore, I urge that you learn to laugh as a self-expression, not as a pretense.

If a woman with no warmth in her heart could make friends so easily by a pleasant laugh, think how much a man or woman with a really cordial heart could do.

An attractive show window is necessary to lure people into a shop even if the things inside are most desirable. And so even the most desirable people cannot afford to be entirely without show-window characteristics such as good manners, the ability to talk small talk, an agreeable presence and a pleasant laugh.

A pleasant smile is a good thing, but a pleasant laugh is infinitely better. So don't be afraid to laugh, both with people and at them—when they want to be laughed at. And don't you think such a time doesn't exist. Most people are as avid to be laughed at as a cat is to have its back scratched; provided, of course, you laugh at them at the right time—that is, when they intend to be amusing.

Can you laugh?

If you can't why don't you learn to?

Pertinent Suggestions on the care of the little ones during the hot months.

Out of every one hundred (100) babies born in the civilized world, twenty-five die in the first year. In each one hundred (100) deaths among children under two years of age thirty-seven are caused by diseases of the digestive system.

When we stop long enough to seriously consider the matter—the saddened homes, the heart-broken mothers and fathers, the loss of society and State—and come to realize that at least one-half of this loss is avoidable; that it is due largely to negligence and ignorance, don't you think it is time to start to campaign to educate the mothers and fathers in the care of their children?

Many of the cases of "summer diarrhea" which terminate fatally could have been easily controlled in their early stages, that is the first twenty-four hours, had the proper measures been employed.

Hot weather does not kill babies in itself. Deaths are chiefly due to the effects of hot weather upon the food. Mothers who are nursing babies must be especially careful of their own health during the hot summer months. They must avoid over-working, getting too warm, too rich and heavy foods, and last, but not least, avoid fits of anger.

Diarrhea is an effort on the part of Nature to rid the digestive tract of offending (poisonous) material. The frequent foul smelling, greenish, slimy stool, vomiting, rise in temperature and dry, hot skin are the result of

To a quart of vinegar the following proportion of ground spices is very good. Two teaspoons each of cinnamon, of cloves, allspice, one teaspoon of mace, one of celery salt, one-half teaspoon of black pepper and as much cayenne as will lie on the point of a knife.

Other condiments may be used; ginger, allspice, mustard, curry, are all excellent. Horse radish sliced or spiced can be put in after boiling and is said to preserve the strength of the vinegar. (A half a cup to a gallon is the proportion.) Cider vinegar is the best for pickling, as it is the most healthful and contains the acetic acid.

There are many vinegars that can be made by those who have time and inclination for the work that add to the flavor of different pickles. Honey vinegar is one of these and it is used for sweet pickles and pickled melons and other fruits.

Maple sugar vinegar is another that particular housewives make and use for pickled peaches, but the making of these is a lost art in the cities, where it is difficult to find space to store such a gallon jug of vinegar in the city pantries. You can, however, insist on having cider vinegar instead of white wine or malt vinegar.

One of the finest pickles is known as "Old" pickle and they are especially liked by persons of delicate digestions who cannot eat the ordinary pickle.

For these select uniform, medium sized pickles, slice them thin and lay in salt water for three hours. Drain off this brine and freshen if you care for onion flavor add three pints of small white onions sliced and left in cold water while the pickles are in the brine.

Mix three ounces of white mustard seed, two ounces of whole pepper, one ounce of celery seed and put loose in the pickles. Pour on one pint of pure olive oil or best salad oil if the flavor of olive oil is not approved. Mix well together and cover with cold vinegar. Put in Mason jars and they will be ready to use in a few days. This recipe makes almost two gallons.

Dill pickles are always liked by foreigners but seldom by Americans who have not become accustomed to the flavor of the dill plant, for this reason large cucumber pickles are often omitted from tables that would enjoy them if they were spiced with something else.

These particular people will like sweet cucumbers if they are properly made. Cut a dozen large ones into quarters and soak in a weak brine over night. Drain and freshen and heat in vinegar; lift from the vinegar and pack in jars; reheat the vinegar and add a pound of sugar, an ounce of cassia buds, a few sticks of cinnamon and a few cloves. Heat this to the boiling point and pour over the pickles. Keep closely covered.

Mustard dressing for pickles.—To a half a gallon of cider vinegar take half a pound of mustard, one tablespoon of turmeric, two and a half tablespoons of curry powder, two tablespoons of ginger, one teaspoon of cayenne pepper. Mix these together with a little vinegar until the lumps are out, add a cup of sugar and one cup of flour and enough more vinegar to beat to a paste, then stir it into the half gallon of hot vinegar and continue stirring until it is scalded when it is ready to use.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

THE community cannot rise much above the level of the individual home, and the home rises only by the pull of the community regulations or by the initiative of a few especially far-sighted individuals. —Ellen Richards.

SOME GOOD ENTREES.

There is such a diversity of food combinations, of fritters and vegetables, meat and fish used for entrees, that he is indeed hard to please who cannot find one to his taste.

Pickled Fish.—Cut into pieces for serving any kind of white fish, boiled and cold. Boil a pint of vinegar with one-half a bay leaf, one teaspoonful of cloves and a tablespoonful each of allspice and pepper corns twenty minutes. When it is cold pour over the pieces of boiled fish. When ready to serve, pour off the vinegar and garnish with parsley.

Sardines dipped in fritter batter and fried in hot fat, then served with a hot tartar sauce, are a pleasant variety to serve.

Meat Dumplings.—Season one cup of fine chopped cold meat and mix with the unbeaten whites of two eggs. Shape in balls and drop into hot water or tomato sauce for five minutes, and serve on toast.

Fish Timbales.—To each cup of creamed fish, salt or fresh, add one well-beaten egg, and seasoning if desired. Pack in buttered cups, or in one dish, and steam or bake until firm enough to turn from the molds.

Chicken Timbales.—Mix thoroughly one pint of chopped chicken, one cup of stale bread crumbs or chicken stuffing, one-half teaspoonful of mixed herbs, saltspoon of pepper, half a teaspoonful of salt, a cup of milk or stock and two beaten eggs. Celery salt, cayenne, parsley, onion and lemon juice also may be used for seasoning. Pack in small molds, well buttered, and steam fifteen minutes. Turn from the molds and serve with or without sauce.

A most delicious entree may be prepared from the canned fish balls. A hot white sauce in which to heat and pour around them, is served with them. They are so delicate and spongy that they appear to be something quite unusual.

HEART AND HOME TALKS

BY BARBARA BOYD

The Vacation at Home

AFTER an uncomfortable week or so in a tiny room, with fare none too palatable, many a woman returning from her vacation wonders if she wouldn't have been better off if she had stayed at home. As she enters again her comfortable room where everything is just as she wants it, as she sits down to the home table, where the things she likes, cooked as she likes, are served, she often thinks she was foolish to go off and endure discomfort and pay a high price for it under the delusion that she was having a good time.

To be sure, even if one is not so comfortable at home, there are certain benefits to be reaped from a vacation away from home. But there are likewise decided benefits to be gained from a vacation at home, if taken in the right way.

The trouble with the home vacation is that we seldom take it in the right way. Frequently when a woman takes her vacation at home, she decides she will make herself some new dresses she needs. Or else she works feverishly to fashion some dainty neckwear, make a shirtwaist or two, trim a hat. Perhaps she turns in and fixes her room all over, because she never can find time to do it while she is going to business. She gets new curtains, makes cushion covers, embroiders a scarf for her bureau, and otherwise works harder than she ever did at her desk. For all such work is harder work because she is unused to it.

And as a result, she goes back to business far more worn out than she was when she left. If a woman decides to take her vacation at home, she should vary her usual manner of living just as much as possible. She shouldn't rush around feverishly doing everything possible. She should make up her mind to get all the good possible out of the home vacation, in the way of a comfortable room and the food she likes, and in addition to loaf and rest and idle all she can.

She should not get up in the morning until late. She should sleep just as long as she wants to. This is a luxury denied her during rushing business days. Let her take it now. If it would be still more of a rest, and it can be planned, let her have her breakfast in her own room. The money spent on a trip away from home can be used to pay for these additional comforts at home. Of course, if her mother is doing the work, and this means extra work for her mother, then she should forego this luxury. But if there is a maid, and by a little extra payment she can secure this extra service, it is worth it.

Then she should do the things she likes to do,—read, practice, walk, take trolley rides. If she enjoys just lounging around the house, chatting with the home folks, let her do this. But she shouldn't mope about discontentedly wishing she had something to do. Neither should she turn in and make her winter wardrobe or clean house for fall.

If a woman will make the home vacation, a vacation, she will get as much benefit from it, if not more, as she will from a stay at some resort. But when one takes a vacation at home, the temptation is to work, to do all the odds and ends that have been accumulating for months past. And this is often the reason the home vacation does not pan out in the matter of rest and recreation as was expected. There is nothing wrong with the home vacation, if it is made a simon-pure vacation.

Barbara Boyd.

Heart and Home Problems

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: A gentleman with whom I got acquainted away from home told me he was glad he had met me. (1)—I thanked him. Was that right? (2)—He wanted to come to see me Sunday night, but I told him I had a date. Then he wanted to come Sunday afternoon and take me auto riding. But I refused. Was I right? (3)—What is a home remedy for falling hair?

MISS INQUISITIVE. (1)—Yes. (2)—If the man is of good character and your parents approve there would be no harm in taking an auto ride with him. (3)—Give the hair an egg shampoo about every two weeks. Rub a very little vasoline on the scalp each night, after giving the hair a good brushing with a clean brush.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1)—I have dark hair, blue eyes and dark complexion; what am I? (2)—I go to school and don't like it. I would rather go to the mill. My parents don't want to send me to the mill. (3)—Have a little sister six weeks old and we don't know what to name her. What would be a nice name? (4)—Is my writing good?

SCHOOL GIRL. (1)—You are a "mixed type." (2)—Your parents are right about keeping you out of the mill. You will thank them later when you understand better. (3)—Helen, Myrtle, Narcissus, Violet, Eleanor, Edith, are pretty names. (4)—Yes.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1)—One girl has light hair and brown eyes; what is she? Another has dark hair and blue eyes; what is she? (2)—I am sixteen and in love with a fellow of nineteen. He calls on another girl, but does not like her. What is to be done? (3)—How can I get him away from her? (4)—Am I too young to have a friend of a girl, that has one fellow one night and another the next? (5)—Am I too young to go to theatres with a fellow?

Relieved Embarrassment. "Dear Clara," wrote the young man, "pardon me, but I'm getting so forgetful. I proposed to you last night, but really forgot whether you said yes or no." "Dear Will," she replied by note, "so glad to hear from you. I know I said 'no' to some one last night, but I had forgotten just who it was." —London Opinion.

Love All. There is no balm to a man's heart like love, not only the love others feel towards him, but that he feels towards others. Be in love with all things, not only with your fellows, but with the whole world, with every creature that walks the earth, with the birds in the air, with the insects in the grass.—H. Fielding Hall.

Prevent Hair Loss By Using Herpicide In Time
Did you ever try to discover a reason for the dying of a valuable plant? You perhaps found that life was destroyed by some insect or parasite working about the roots and sapping away the elements which go to support plant life. The dandruff germ exercises the same destructive influence upon the life of the hair. It forces its way down the follicle around the hair bulb and thus prevents the hair from getting proper nourishment. The hair dies and drops out.

Newbro's Herpicide prevents this by killing the germ. It also frees the scalp from the accumulations of dirt and sebum skin. With the removal of these obstacles to a clean, healthy scalp, the hair will grow naturally and luxuriantly.

Herpicide is known as the Original Dandruff Germ Destroyer. Newbro's Herpicide in 50c and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

Applications may be obtained at the better barber shops and hair dressing parlors. Send 10c in postage or silver to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R, Detroit, Mich., for a nice sample of Herpicide and a booklet telling all about the hair.

A WOMAN'S OBSERVATIONS

Edna K. Woolley

the consumption of their products. Whether the woman's vote will or will not promote temperance, nobody knows, of course. Women will probably be as sensible about that as they are about most other things. But if women do organize against the saloon, they will but be following in the path already pointed out by the greatest business heads in the country.

Significant Facts. Here are some interesting recent developments: Two great railroad institutions have forbidden their employees to drink intoxicating liquors not only "on duty," but "off duty," as well.

Another great railroad company has just given orders that no intoxicating liquors shall be served at any time on its trains.

A report comes from Chicago that the consumption of beer in that city during the past year lacks 35,000 barrels of the year before.

The internal revenue collector for 22 Ohio counties reports a decided falling off in revenue from beer and cigars in the past year.

These are only a few significant facts. A little search will discover more. The business world is reforming itself upon the knowledge that efficiency depends upon sobriety, and that even the occasional tippler cannot be trusted with work which needs steady hands and clear brains. Drunkenness is not tolerated even among brain-workers, as it was once upon a time and originally could be achieved only on an alcohol-doped mind. Many a genius went to a drunkard's grave largely because he believed and everybody else believed that inspiration depended upon "spirits."

No matter what some pessimists say, we are today putting forth better books, better pictures, better works of art as well as utility, in every direction, than any of our forbidding ancestors did, and you will find that practically all of the good work done today is accomplished under normal conditions.

It's a dizzy old world at best, and any of us who would get ahead in it have need of unduded heads and a sound physique.

There is still a considerable percentage of men and, alas! women, who seem to think that there can't be any joy unaccompanied by cocktails or something of that sort. And there is still that large mass of saloon patrons who can't see beyond the stuff they get over the bar. It is this mass of men, by the way, who will vote against woman suffrage. They are afraid that women at the polls will take their beer and whiskey away from them, and they are encouraged in this belief by those brewers and distillers who will lose money if there is any decrease in the consumption of their products.

MUNICIPAL EXHIBITION HELD IN DUSSELDORF.

Dusseldorf, the "park city," the most beautiful and modern city in west Germany, long since won the distinction of being the most successful exhibition center in the empire. This summer, from June 23 to October 31, the principal cities of Rhineland and Westphalia are uniting in an exhibition at Dusseldorf, which presents their extraordinary industrial, economical, and political development, the importance of which can scarcely be rivaled throughout Europe. The exhibition is divided into five groups: City building; hygienic institutions and development; hospitals, and care of the sick; house building; and industry of all Germany.

The first four groups will be devoted to plans and models of the most modern achievements in these lines of work, with special attention to a systematic treatment of the various methods, whereas the fifth group represents thousands of industrial products such as are of importance to every city, in carrying out its wide reaching undertakings. As a whole it gives a splendid idea of the activity of German cities, their governments and institutions, many of which may be justly pronounced models of their kind.

PROPOSES THAT CITY RUN FOUR HUNDRED ACRE FARM.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—An income of $40,000 a year from a municipal farm is contemplated by William F. Vahlberg, city park superintendent, if plans he is making for agricultural enterprises are carried out. He proposes to place in cultivation 400 acres along Grand boulevard, an automobile highway twenty-nine miles long that completely circles the city and which was completed recently at a cost of about $100 an acre. The area to be cultivated is that owned by the city from the outer edge of the speedway proper to the border of the tract. Vahlberg expects to plant alfalfa principally and some wheat, oats, and probably other crops from which there is a good income. The planting and cultivation of these crops would give employment to the small army of men employed by the park board, and the profits to the board from the several crops would be considerably larger than if the area were cultivated by private parties.

CAN NOT FAVOR UNION LABOR IN CONTACTS.

(Milwaukee Free Press)
The city cannot discriminate in favor of union labor on city work, according to an opinion given to the council judiciary committee by City Attorney Daniel W. Hoan. The opinion was on a resolution now pending, directing the public works commissioner to engage only union bricklayers for sewer work.

"The charter requires the work to be given to the lowest bidder, and consequently the bidders of Wisconsin have uniformly held that such clauses cannot be inserted in a contract," says Mr. Hoan in the opinion.
"However, if the city desires to do this work by union labor, it may be done if the work is performed by the commissioner of public works without the intervention of a formal contract."

BILL POSTING ORDINANCE ADOPTED AT BELVIDERE.

The city of Belvidere has adopted a new bill posting ordinance. The ordinance requires a license at a charge of $50 per year with proportionately smaller amounts for less and political literature are exempted, also notices of home entertainments, sale bills, sales by citizens, etc. Prohibition against posting on telephone poles, walks, etc. are made and also against posting on private property without the verbal consent of the owner.

City Hall Lights Costly.
Chicago, Ill.—Commissioner of Public Works McGann and others about the city hall have made the discovery that it costs more than $1,900 a month to furnish the city hall with electricity. The expense seems heavy to them but they say they see no way of reducing it, to the use of electrical current seems to warrant that expenditure. During the month of May light current cost $1,003 and power current cost $930. There are about 15,000 lights in the building and the current for power is about 1,200 h.p.

Oil for All State Roads.

Norwich, Conn.—Oil enough to complete the oiling of all the state roads in the county has now been ordered and is on the way, a total of fourteen cars, 10,000 gallons to a car, having been ordered by Deputy Road Inspector John Donoyan. It will be put on as fast as it arrives and when all the 10,000 gallons have been spread the travel on all the State roads in the county will be as near dustless as it is possible to make it.

Prefer Pillar Lights.

Some time ago the resident of Kinzie avenue in Racine, petitioned the common council for gooseneck lights on that thoroughfare and this was granted. In the meantime the park board installed a pillar lighting system in Horlick park, with which the residents of Kinzie avenue are so pleased that they have petitioned the council for the right to install the pillar system instead of the goosenecks.

Electric Power for Cadott.

At a special election Saturday the village of Cadott voted by a majority of 17, to issue bonds to the amount of $7,000 for the purpose of erecting a transmission line from Chippewa Falls and to buy electric power for power and lighting purposes from the Chippewa Valley Railway Light & Power Co. The erection of the pole line will be started immediately.

Survive Recall Election.

Oakland, Cal.—Mayor Frank K. Mott, and Commissioner A. J. Bacos and F. C. Turner survived by a substantial majority a recall election, which socialists and industrial workers of the world were declared to be administrations most bitter opponents.

A large vote was cast, women polling the heavy ballot.

Order Boulevard Lights.

Twenty-two boulevard lights have been ordered for the Winnebago street viaduct at Rockford to be installed at cost of $804. Boulevard lights for other streets have been petitioned for.

Install Auxiliary Plant.

Part of Eau Claire's auxiliary power plant to operate the intake pumps at the water works in times of emergency has been installed, the big 25-horse power gasoline engine having been put up and set in place. Another gasoline engine, a 15-horse power, is also to be installed immediately to complete the auxiliary plant.

To Build Model Tenements.

Paris, France.—The French government has authorized the city of Paris to borrow $40,000,000 to build model municipal tenement houses in which the rentals will be the lowest possible consistent with the upkeep of the property.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES.

(By Howard L. Rann.)

THE MOTOR BOAT.

The motor boat is a series of short-haired explosions entirely surrounded by smelt.

The result is that all of the conversation carried on aboard a motor boat while it is in a state of eruption is borrowed from the sign language of a deaf and dumb home.

Motor boats are built for the purpose of hitting the high spots in the briny deep on the principle of the Swedish polo vault. The speed of one of these boats depends to a large extent upon whether the skipper is full or only half full.

The motive power of a motor boat consists of 15-cent gasoline mixed with ripe profanity, which makes one of the most stutty and odorous combinations in the annals of any people.

Nothing ever goes wrong with a motor boat except when you want to get somewhere by water. This is a dangerous experiment, as the boat is liable to choke up with suppressed rage and stand on its hind feet in a protesting attitude.

Almost all of the motor boats now afloat are subject to disease, the most common complaints being the shaking palsy, paralysis of the duodenum, stiff neck, cirrhosis of the crankshaft and granuloma of the spark plug. Any one of these diseases is likely to prove fatal unless checked in time by going over the engine with the reverse end of the axe.

The motor boat which comes in contact with the water when under full speed is considered a melancholy failure. The late models run on the keel in a perpendicular position giving the passenger the soothing sensation of riding a Montana mustang with the bridle off.

The most pleasing feature of the motor boat is the exhaust, which is a cross between a cannon firecracker and the crack of doom. It explodes with increasing energy and opens yawning crevices in the ear drums of the innocent bystander. In all other respects the motor boat makes an ideal Christmas present.

DISCLOSURES SHOCK NEW YORK CITIZENS

Police Corruption Unearthed in Rosenthal Investigation Astonishes Most Optimistic.

(Special to the Gazette.)

New York, Aug. 10.—The sensational disclosures in connection with the Rosenthal murder do not reflect particular credit upon the police department of New York City and it is not surprising that the citizens, or at least the better classes, are thoroughly aroused by the scandal. If anything was needed to confirm the public confidence in the police organization of the city, the Rosenthal murder case has more than supplied what was lacking. It had been stated repeatedly by men of high standing in the community that the police organization of the city, the Rosenthal criminal elements, giving them protection in return for blackmail contributions, but the optimists, which citizens were inclined to believe that these grave accusations were groundless or at least largely exaggerated. The statements of some of the implicated witnesses in the Rosenthal case, however, not only confirm the accusations against the police, but disclose a condition of almost unbelievable corruption permitting the entire police organization. Of course, that does not mean that every member of the police force is corrupt and a grateful but it may easily be understood that the corruption which unites the superior officers with the criminal element must necessarily lie the hands of the honest and conscientious policemen who are trying to do their duty.

It appears from the disclosures of certain witnesses in the Rosenthal murder case that the gamblers and keepers of disreputable resorts of this city have annually paid from $2,500,000 to $3,000,000 to the police and certain high officials in league with the corrupt police officials. If that is true—and there is other corroborative evidence to support these statements—the business of the gambling houses and other illegal resorts in New York City must be flourishing and extremely profitable. The enormous sum paid in blackmail for "protection," it is reasonable to assume, constitutes only a small percentage of the ill-gotten gains of the keepers of these resorts. These gains, which probably equal, in the aggregate, a sum ten times as great, are derived from the countless victims who are flooded every year in the gambling houses and other low resorts of the city. Considering the dishonest methods employed by the gambling and other halls of New York City, Monte Carlo would seem, in comparison, an institution of high moral character.

How desperate the criminal element in this city is in this present crisis, is demonstrated by the fact that within a few days after James Verolia, the proprietor of an Italian cafe, had disclosed the hiding place of "Dago Frank" Cipriotti, one of the men implicated in the Rosenthal murder, he was shot and killed by several Italians out of revenge. The fate of Verolia is likely to have a deterring influence upon the willingness of important witnesses in the case.

For several Sundays the police all over the city have made wholesale arrests of men and boys who were found playing baseball on the Sabbath. The magistrates, however, decided in every case that the mere playing of ball on Sunday constituted no violation of the Sunday law so long as no admission was charged to spectators. In several cases where programs were sold on the grounds, the men selling the programmes were adjudged guilty of violating the Sunday laws and fined. The amateur players throughout the city are highly elated over the attitude of the magistrates, but it is expected that some of the straight-laced church people will rebel against these decisions and will try to bring the matter before some higher court.

Five years ago Chief Meyer Crawford, a Russian Jew, now an American citizen by naturalization, was married in New York to Rosie Goldberg, a Jewish girl of the same nationality. A short time ago he applied to the Supreme Court for annulment of his marriage, basing his request upon a singular claim, unprecedented in the annals of American courts. He claimed that Rosie had married him under false pretenses and that at the time of his marriage he had not known that Rosie was deaf and dumb. This claim seems utterly absurd, yet there is reason to believe that the man really was not aware of the physical defects of Rosie at the time he married her. The marriage was arranged, according to his statement, while he was still in Russia. He married the girl immediately after his arrival in New York, as he had been informed that the girl could not speak Russian and he could not speak English, he did not become aware of the fact that the girl was deaf and dumb until some time after they had been married.

An interesting history is connected with the final statement of a will case by which the Zion Society of New York fell heir to more than $1,000,000 from the estate of William Nixon, who died in 1905 in the Adelaide Hospital, Dublin, Ireland. While engaged in the furnishing and clothing business at Beaver Falls, Pa., in 1897, William Nixon found his keenest relations between them. The merchants, but there were the kindest relations between them. The friendship went so far that when Nixon became financially involved these competitors came to the rescue of his enterprise and enabled him to recoup his fortune. Mindful of the aid he had received, Nixon, before his death, made a will leaving his entire estate, with the exception of several bequests to intimate friends and after the payment of his debts and testamentary expenses, to the Zion Society of New York City.

When the new school term begins the Board of Education of this city will be asked to permit a trial of the experiment of electrifying one of the school rooms in which a class of defective pupils is being taught. This experiment has been tried in Stockholm, Sweden, under the direction of Svante Arrhenius, a noted physicist, with remarkable success. The electrification is produced by a series of wires imbedded in the walls of the class room and through which high frequency currents are permitted to pass. It is planned to have two school rooms, one electrified, the other not, and both containing the same number of pupils of practically the same degree of deficiency. At the end of a certain period comparisons will be made of the corresponding progress made by the pupils in each room and if the result should be favorable to electrification, the experiment is to be tried on a larger scale.

You Ought to Know More About This New Milk.

Quality, Purity, Healthfulness in Every Drop of This New Inspected Milk

Realizing the need of an absolutely pure milk in its raw state for the use of children and invalids we have recently placed on the market just such a milk as has been long needed.

This milk comes from a selected herd of Guernsey cattle from the F. O. Uehling farm. These Guernseys are all high bred cattle and are the best known for milk giving purposes.

Immediately after the milking this fine milk is cooled to a temperature of 55 degrees Fahrenheit instead of letting it cool slowly. This preserves its goodness.

Then comes the bottling in specially clean, sterilized in steam bottles. Each bottle is surmounted and sealed by a sanitary air tight tin cap similar to those used on pop bottle.

Repeated tests have shown this milk to be rich in butter fat, testing 4.8 per cent butter fat in each test. There is no richer milk obtainable. It is very healthful.

When you receive this milk, you receive just the pure sweet milk, nothing has been added nor has anything been taken away

THE STRANGER

BY ELSIE ENDICOTT.

BOY was driving a nice old gentleman over to Meekville from the railroad at Larkins. The nice old gentleman was about 65 years old, with ruddy cheeks and jolly manner. The boy belonged to the livery stable at Larkins, and he was a talkative boy. Therefore, the two got on well together from the start.

The nice old gentleman said that he might have a brother or sister or aunt or uncle, or some other sort of relation at Meekville, and it had occurred to him to go over there for a week and settle the point.

"Where was he from? O, call it Japan. Did he think of buying any land? Not unless offered at a great bargain. Know anyone in Larkins or Meekville? Well, no, sorry to say. Wasn't looking for a mineral spring? No, health tip-top. Had he heard that Mrs. Gladys, postmistress at Meekville for years, was dead, and that her daughter, Nanny, had been appointed in her place? Bless you, no!

"Well, it's so," said the boy, rather proud that he had secured the interest of the nice old gentleman. "Yes, the widow she died of something, and Nanny is 20 years old and the best-looking girl in town, and Jim Hopkins, son of Squire Hopkins, is pestering her to marry him."

"You don't say," exclaimed the old gentleman.

"Yep, but Nanny don't like Jim. Her beau is named Tom Henderson. Works in the grist mill. Mighty nice fellow, but got no money, while the Squire says he will give Jim $5,000 if he marries Nanny. There may be a fight 'tween Jim and Tom; if there it will be an awful one."

"Dear, dear me!"

"And the Squire lost a letter with $5 in it in the mail, and he holds a mortgage of $350 on Nanny's house and lot—the one her mother owned—and so if she don't marry Jim there's going to be a row. Oh, we have things happen around here."

"Yes, I see."

"And that's Jim Hopkins coming now in his buggy. Let me turn out of the road."

"What why?"

"Because Jim would just as lief take a wheel off as not. He says he owns the roads around here."

The stranger took the lines from the boy and stopped the horse in the middle of the road. Jim Hopkins came up at a fast clip, but seeing a stranger in the other vehicle came to a stop and called out:

"You, there! Get out of the way! You are obstructing a public road."

"There's room to drive around me," replied the nice old gentleman.

"But I won't do it! You boy there—drive your rig to one side or I'll have you in jail! You want to remember that my father is a justice of the peace. Get a move on!"

The nice old gentleman and the boy remained inactive. Jim swore as he cursed and threatened and finally turned around and made for Meekville at a fast pace.

He reached the village half an hour ahead of the others and the nice old gentleman had hardly registered at the tavern when he was served with a warrant for unlawful obstruction and taken before Squire Hopkins. The great village magnate had his son as the only witness and fined the defendant $5.

"Thanks!" said the nice old gentleman as he paid and withdrew.

That afternoon as he sauntered into the postoffice he found Jim Hopkins there. He was talking to the little postmistress behind the boxes. He was warning her that she had better do this and that as his father had fully made up his mind.

The talk ceased as the nice old gentleman drew nearer to ask for mail through a rich blockade runner.

After the war was over the vessel that Mr. Morrison was stationed on was sent around from Atlantic to Pacific, passing around the Horn. The passage was a stormy one and once during an extraordinary gale the vessel was hoisted to, and with hatches battened down laid to for sixty two hours, the men below decks not being able to secure any food or water during that entire period.

Rounding the Horn in three days, in the old sailing vessels without steam equipment was nothing like even the journey today, which mariners fear in the stormy seasons, with steam and all modern contrivances. It was a long arduous journey with seas running high and the vessels pitching and tossing about like corks in a tub of water.

Reaching San Francisco, Mr. Morrison was transferred to the supply boat James Town and sailed north to Alaska, then a Russian territory, just about to be purchased by the United States. For nine months the James town lay in the Arctic waters. It was the only vessel that returned from the now rich territory, from Russia to the United States.

Later Mr. Morrison returned to the States and the same year, 1868 was given his discharge at the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

While a resident of Janesville Mr. Morrison was always an interested member of the William H. Sargent Post of the G. A. R. and prominent at all memorial services. He served as Chaplain of the local post for many years and since removing to Detroit has been elected to a similar office there in the Fairbanks post. Over eighty still he retains his memory and proves a most interesting visitor.

An hour later the stranger appeared at the grist mill. No, he had no meat to sell and didn't want to buy any flour. He was just looking around. He talked with Tom Henderson and grew friendly.

The loungers at the tavern

Squire had a mortgage and it was overdue. He had lost a letter in the mails, and enclosed was a $5 bill. Curious about that letter, mailed right there in Meekville and never got to Cincinnati, only 30 miles away. The Squire had already filed a complaint and that missing $5 bill. Some of them said it was a shame that the Squire had indicted a fine, but the victim laughed at that. He said he was a man who bore no grudge.

An hour after supper he appeared at the postoffice and saw the evening mail distributed and passed out. Then he coolly walked through into the living room, and when Miss Nanny looked at him in surprise he sent her 10-year-old sister into the postoffice part and began a conversation that lasted the best part of an hour. The girl was awed but not afraid of him.

Just as the nice old gentleman was about to take his departure, Jim Hopkins opened the door without first knocking, and strode into the room. After a look at both occupants he said to the girl:

"Well, Nanny, the governor says he will give you three days in which to make up your mind. Been telling old grandpa here all about it? He don't count."

"Old grandpa" sat down again and began talking about the postal business, and after ten minutes Jim left. The next day Squire Hopkins received a call from the late defendant. He was surprised, but had his pomosty with him. He had it with him until the nice old gentleman showed him the missing old gentleman's affidavit from all right, but there their affidavits that it had contained no money.

In demanding the whole highway Jim had sworn many oaths. That was against the state law. He had made threats. There was law for that. In taking the mortgage on the widow's place the squire had exacted 7 per cent interest. There was a law for that. The magnate had made a false charge as to the missing letter and he was using threats to coerce the little postmistress into a detested marriage. There were laws covering those things.

Squire Hopkins blustered and bluffed and then wilted. That evening Jim Hopkins didn't call on Nanny Gladys, but Tom Henderson did. He found her in tears, and it was several minutes before she could explain.

"Why, Tom, the squire is going to give back the mortgage, and I'm not to marry Jim, and that missing letter has been found, but the nice old gentleman must expect I'm going to marry him!"

"How do you know?"

"Be-cause he said I must be at the tavern at 10 o'clock tomorrow forenoon to be married. He's nice—and nice—and nice—but—"

"And he said I must be there, too."

For half an hour they sat holding hands and sighing and saying never a word. Then Tom went away, a wretched young man. The next forenoon they walked over to the tavern like a couple going to execution.

"Come right up to the parlor," said the nice old gentleman as he met them at the door. "Minister is here and it won't take five minutes. Haste off. Tom, here is the ring. Right over here, please. Now, then, reverend, go ahead and tie a hard and fast knot."

"But I thought—thought—"

The little postmistress after she had been made Mrs. Tom Henderson.

"O, no," replied the nice old gentleman, "I'm just a postoffice inspector and a nice old gentleman. Bless you, my children, bless you."

Reminiscences of the Civil War-- Farragut's Entry in Mobile Bay

When Farragut sailed into Mobile Bay on the old Hartford, tied to the mast so that if he was shot and killed his body would not be swept overboard, William V. Morrison, a former resident of this city, was carpenter mate on board the same vessel.

For six years and seven months Mr. Morrison sailed under the stars and stripes, taking part in many of the naval engagements of the Civil war and later rounding Cape Horn and visiting the then far off and frozen Alaska. His experiences on the vessels he aided in and the commanders he served under, are most vivid and delightful to the many hearers of the sea tales he tells.

Mr. Morrison made Janesville his home for many years and but a short time ago removed to Detroit where he lives with three cousins. However he does not forget his first love and he turns on yearly pilgrimages to the Bower City to greet his old friends, renew acquaintances and live over the past. Each year he finds the list

The vessels in those days were wooden hulks compared to the modern cruiser or battleship, but the men that manned them had just as brave hearts and were just as courageous as the sailors who went to Manila Bay with Dewey years later. It was a bitter fight and Mr. Morrison went all through it.

It was at Mobile that Mr. Morrison saw the great Admiral weep in the very arms of victory.

"It was at the battle of Port Morgan, on Mobile Bay," said "Uncle Billy" and the boatswain's mate had both legs shot off. He was put in the sick bay, and Admiral Farragut came down and asked him what the trouble was.

"Look under the hammock," said the boatswain's mate, and there the two legs were lying.

"Well, what a pity that a man like you are, that's built so stout and rugged, should be so crippled," said Admiral Farragut, and the tears rolled down his cheeks.

"The battle of Port Morgan was fought on August 5, 1864," and would have been wiped out of existence if it had not been for General Granger's land forces. The Rebel batteries in the fort were shelling us pretty hard. Then Gen. Granger's forces came up and blew up the Rebels magazine."

Uncle Billy's baptism of fire came at the bombardment of Ft. Gaines and Ft. Powell along the Atlantic coast. Part of his duty when the battles were being fought was to cut the fuses used in the guns to the proper length and these were carried to the gunners by the powder monkeys who rushed from the magazine hold, where the men worked to the gun decks with fuses and powder.

The Rebels' aim had become so accurate that one of their big shells struck the vessel fortunately on the opposite side from the magazine, tearing out a big part of the bulwarks and making it dangerous should a sea come up.

Mr. Morrison was ordered to repair it and under the fire of the Rebel guns the fort he climbed over the side of the vessel and plugged the damage up. "The Rebels kept firing at us so fast that the cannon balls struck all around the ship" he said in telling of his experience and my clothes were soaking wet as though I had fallen into the sea. I set before I had finished my repair work. Why I wrung my clothes dry afterwards to get the water out."

In 1864 Mr. Morrison's term of enlistment having closed he re-enlisted and continued to serve Uncle Sam. The last year of the contest was more a blockade affair than actual engagements, but the vessel he was stationed in was kept busy watching the blockade runners and patrolling the coast south of the Mason and Dixie line. It was strenuous work and not much enjoyed by the crews engaged in it except for prize money that might come to them through the capture of a rich blockade runner.

After the war was over the vessel that Mr. Morrison was stationed on was sent around from Atlantic to Pacific, passing around the Horn. The passage was a stormy one and once during an extraordinary gale the vessel was hoisted to, and with hatches battened down laid to for sixty two hours, the men below decks not being able to secure any food or water during that entire period.

Rounding the Horn in three days, in the old sailing vessels without steam equipment was nothing like even the journey today, which mariners fear in the stormy seasons, with steam and all modern contrivances. It was a long arduous journey with seas running high and the vessels pitching and tossing about like corks in a tub of water.

Reaching San Francisco, Mr. Morrison was transferred to the supply boat James Town and sailed north to Alaska, then a Russian territory, just about to be purchased by the United States. For nine months the James town lay in the Arctic waters. It was the only vessel that returned from the now rich territory, from Russia to the United States.

Later Mr. Morrison returned to the States and the same year, 1868 was given his discharge at the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

While a resident of Janesville Mr. Morrison was always an interested member of the William H. Sargent Post of the G. A. R. and prominent at all memorial services. He served as Chaplain of the local post for many years and since removing to Detroit has been elected to a similar office there in the Fairbanks post. Over eighty still he retains his memory and proves a most interesting visitor.

You Can Rid Your Body of Disease and Enjoy Health and Happiness--Chiropractic is the Way Out From the Darkness.

It Rests With You. Will You Continue to Be Sick and Suffer Torture When This Modern Science Will Get at the Cause of Your Trouble and Remove It?

The basic principles of Chiropractic are simple, so simple that it seems wonderful that no one ever thought them out prior to a few years ago. These principles are enumerated herewith:

- 1st. That the origin of all nerves, regardless of the system to which they belong have their fountain head directly from the brain or are in touch with it through connecting nerve fibers. Their distribution causes them to enter either the spinal cord, or becoming part of it, or are connected with it by communicating branches.
- 2nd. That the spinal cord is an extension of the brain. It passes out of the skull through an opening at the base into and throughout the spinal canal which extends downward from the brain at the base of the skull. From the spinal cord nerve filaments emerge, on each side of the spinal column between each consecutive pair of vertebrae, from whence they proceed to the parts and organs into which they severally terminate.
- 3rd. That the life and action of every organ, tissue and cell of the body is maintained and controlled by an inherent force or energy which is transformed or individualized by the brain and then transmitted to these respective parts, in the form of mental impulses through the channels provided by the nerves.
- 4th. That when the transmission of mental impulses is normal both in volume and quickness of delivery, or when 100 per cent of mental impulses reaches each organ and tissue in the body in the manner it was intended it should, all the functions are performed as they should be with the result which his known as health. But when the normal flow of mental impulses is interfered with in any manner, the vital activities of the tissues and organs which these mental impulses severally maintain is either increased or diminished, according to the degree of interference, the result, in either case, being a condition which is recognized as some form of disease.
- 5th. That the only place where interference with the flow of mental impulses to a degree sufficient to cause deranged functional activity, or disease can occur, is at the little openings between the vertebrae, on either side of the spinal column, already mentioned and shown in the illustration herewith. At any of these places a slight misalignment or subluxation of a vertebra may so press upon the nerves passing out through it as to interfere more or less seriously, with their conductive power.
- 6th. That Chiropractic affords an exact and scientific method of determining the location of any vertebra, which, on account of its misalignment, is responsible for nerve compression, and also, an original, unique and most effective manner of correcting this abnormal condition, by means of the hands alone, using either the spinous or transverse process of the vertebra as handles or levers.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, August 10, 1872.—Licenses Cut Off Again: There was another meeting of the common council last night and in the course of their proceedings a resolution was offered and adopted that no more liquor licenses be granted during the current year. This makes a dead letter of the motion rescinding a previous resolution which regulated the liquor trade in our city. A license was granted while the motion was in force, to Owen McDermott and other applications would undoubtedly have received like consideration had they been presented.

It is generally conceded that many of the saloons near the depot are selling liquor without license.

UNCLE WALT The Poet Philosopher Copyright, 1909, by George Matthew Adams BY WALT MASON

There came to town a rather sad and lonesome looking pup, a Spitz. Some fellow yelled: "That dog is mad!" And then we all threw sundry fits. We rounded up the skate to ask him where he got his facts; we paused not to investigate, but slammed the pup with catarracts of bricks and rocks and sticks and tiles, and kept the poor beast on the jump; we chased him twenty-seven miles and killed him by the village dump. And then his owner came along and proved to us his dog was sane; we'd done a great and cruel wrong; and on the village placed a stain. For divers days remorse has burned our innards, that such things should be; and yet I doubt if we have learned a lesson. SNAP JUDGMENT from this jamboree. Tomorrow some one may exclaim that Jenks or Jimson is a crook, and then we'll all jump on his frame, and try his little goose to cook. We'll hound our victim from the start, refuse to list in his defense, and take his hide and break his heart, and make him feel like twenty cents. "Just give a day a bad renow," the adage says, "then string him up." We like to run our victim down, be he human or a pup.

CHAPTER I.
The Bonanza King.

The cold of foot-hill California in the month of January held the night. The occupants of the surrey were too cramped and stifled by it, and too uncomfortably enwrapped against it, to speak. Silence as complete as that which lay like a spell on the landscape brooded over them. At the last stopping place, Chinese Gulch, a scattering of houses six miles behind them on the mountain road, they had halted at the main saloon, and whisky and water had been passed to the driver and to the burlier figure on the back seat. The watchers that thronged to the saloon door had eyed the third occupant of the carriage with the intent, sheepish curiosity of the isolated man in presence of the stranger female. Afterward, each one was voluble in his impressions of her face, pale in the smoky lamplight, and the hand that slid, small and white, out of its loose glove when the warming glass was offered her.

Since then both she and her companion had leaned back in their several corners and preserved an unbroken silence.

The surrey sped swiftly along the road which wound in spectral pallor over the shoulder of the foot-hill, now dipping into the blackness of a ravine, then creeping up a bare slope, where the horse's hoofs dug in laboriously amid loosened stones. The solemn loneliness of the landscape, faintly revealed by the light of large, clear stars, seemed to find appropriate expression in this frosty, smoke-breathing stillness.

The larger figure on the back seat moved, and turned a face, all of which was hidden save the eyes, toward its companion.

"Hungry?" queried a deep bass voice; the inquiring polysyllable shot out suddenly over an upturned bulwark of collars.

"Fearfully," came the answer in a muffled feminine treble, that suited the more diminutive bulk.

"Get a move on, Jake," to the driver. "This girl's most famished."

"Hold your horses," growled the other man; "we're just about there."

At these words the woman pricked up her ears, and, leaning forward, peered ahead. As they rounded a protruding angle of the hill, a huddle of roofs and walls spotted with lights came into view, and the slight drew her hand forward with an eagerly-pointing finger.

"So that's Rocky Bar!" she cried. "Have we really got there at last?"

The driver chuckled.

"That's Rocky Bar all right. Now get your appetite good and ready."

"No need," she responded gaily; "it's been ready and waiting for hours. I was beginning to think that you'd lost your way."

"Me!" with an accent of incredulous scorn. "Ah, get out! How does it come, Governor, that Bill Cannon's girl don't know no more about these parts than a young lady from New York?"

"She's never been up here before," said the man on the back seat, beginning to untangle himself from his enfolding rugs. "I've brought her up with me this time to show her some of the places where her pa used to work round with the boys, long before she was ever thought of."

A loud barking of dogs broke out as they approached the first detached houses of the settlement. Shapes appeared at the lighted doorways, and as the surrey drew up at the hotel balcony a crowding of heads was seen in the windows. The entire population of Rocky Bar spent its evenings at this hospitable resort, in summer on the balcony under the shade of the locust trees, in winter round the office stove, splitting and smoking in cheery sociability. But at this hour the great event of Rocky Bar's day was over. The eight stages, the passengers of which dined at the hotel, had long passed onward on their various routes up and down the "mother lode" and into the camps of the Sierra. That the nightly excitement of the "ritualizing up" was to be supplemented by a late arrival in a surrey, driven by Jake McVeigh, the proprietor of the San Jacinto stables, and accompanied by a woman, was a sensational event not often awarded to Rocky Bar, even in the heyday of summer-time.

The occupants of the office crowded into the doorway and pressed themselves against the windows.

The hotel proprietor, an ancient man with a loosened vest, and trousers tucked into long boots, dispersed them as he ushered the strangers into the office. That they were travelers of distinction was obvious, as much from their own appearance as from the fact that Jake McVeigh was driving them himself, in his best surrey and with his finest team. But just how important they were no one guessed till McVeigh followed them in, and into ears stretched for the information dropped the sentence, half-heard, like a stage aside:

"It's Bill Cannon and his daughter Rosa."

Upon the proprietor it had an electric effect. He sped from the room with the alertness of youth, promising "a cold lunch" in a minute. To the others it came as a piece of intelligence that added awe to the lighter emotions of the occasion. By common consent their eyes focused on the great man who stood warming his hands at the stove. Even the rare, unusual woman, revealed now as sufficiently pretty to be an object of future dreams, was interesting only to the younger and more impressionable members of the throng. All but these gazed absorbed, unblinking, at Bill Cannon; the Bonanza King.

He was used to it. It had been a part of his life for years. Eying his admirers with a genial good humor, he entered into conversation with them, his manner marked by an easy familiarity, which swept away all shades of embarrassment, and drew the men around the stove, eager to respond to his questions as to the condition and prospects of the locality. The talk was becoming general and animated, when the ancient man returned and announced that the "cold lunch" was ready and to please "step after him into the dining-room."

This gaunt apartment, grimly adorned and faintly illumined, an occasional lantern backed by a tin reflector projecting a feeble light into its echoing emptiness, was swept of all intruders, and showed a bare-bones bareness of wall and loftiness of roof. Lines of tables, uncovered between flanking wooden benches, were arranged down its length. Across the end of one of these a white cloth was spread and three places set. Jake McVeigh, less innocently democratic than the hotel proprietor, was about to withdraw from the society of his distinguished patron and seat himself in seemingly loneliness at an adjacent table, when Bill Cannon's voice arrested him.

"What are you going off there for, sonny, as if you were a leper? Come over here and sit side of us."

Cannon, his overcoat removed, was seen to be a powerful, thick-set man, with a bulkiness that was more a matter of broad build and muscular development than fat. His coat set ill upon him and strained at the buttons. It had the effect of having worked up toward the shoulders, noticeable in the clothes of men who are deep-chested and sit bunched. He had a short neck which he accommodated with a turn-down collar, a gray beard, clipped close to his cheeks and square on the chin, and gray hair, worn rather long and combed sleekly and without parting back from his forehead. In age he was close to seventy, but the alertness and intelligence of a conquering energy and vitality were in his glance, and showed in his movements, deliberate, but sure and full of precision. He spoke little as he ate his dinner, leaning over his plate and responding to the remarks of his daughter with an occasional monosyllable that might have sounded curt, had it not been accompanied with a lazy cast of his eye upon her that was as full of affection as a caress. The young lady, who had also put off her outer wraps, still wore her hat, which was wide-brimmed and cast a shadow over the upper part of her face. Below it her hair showed a fine, bright blonde, giving forth silky gleams in the lamplight. To the peeping heads in the doorway she seemed a creature instinct with romantic charm, which was expressed in such delicacies of appearance as a pearl-white throat, a rounded chin, and lips that smiled readily. These graces, eagerly deciphered through dimness and distance, had the attraction of the semi-seen, and imagination, thus given an encouraging fillip, invested Bill Cannon's girl with a haunting beauty. It was remarked that she bore no resemblance to her father in coloring, features, or build. In talking it over later, Rocky Bar decided that she must favor her mother, who, as all California knew, had been a waitress in the Yuba Hotel at Marysville, when Bill Cannon, then a miser in the Freeze-Out, had wooed and won her.

"What Afe You Going Off There For, Sonny, as If You Were a Leper?"

It was toward the end of the meal, that, looking at the opposite wall, her glance was caught by a large clock to which she drew her father's attention:

"Half-past nine! How fashionable we are! And when are you going to get us up to Antelope, Mr. McVeigh?"

McVeigh studied the clock ponderingly as he felt in his breast pocket for his toothpick.

"Well," he said, "if we leave here at ten and make good time the hull way—it's up hill pretty much without a break—I'll get you there about midnight."

She made a little grimace.

"And it will be much colder, won't it?"

"Colder 'n' colder. You'll be goin' higher with every step. Antelope's on the slope of the Sierra, and you can't expect to be warm up there in the end of January."

"If you hadn't wanted to come," said her father, "you'd have been just about getting ready for Mrs. Ryan's ball. Isn't this about the magic hour when you begin to lay on the first layer of war-paint?"

The girl looked at the clock, nodding with a faint, reminiscent smile.

"Just about," she said. "I'd have been probably looking at my dress laid out on the bed and saying to myself, 'Now I wonder if it's worth while getting into that thing and having all the bother of going to this ball.' On the evenings when I go out, there's always a stage when that happens."

McVeigh, with his toothpick in full operation, looked at her, admiring and half-comprehending, for the first time feeling himself an outsider. She caught his eye, read its meaning, and with the quick tact of a delicate nature, said:

"It's Mrs. Cornelius Ryan in San Francisco. She has a ball to-night and I was going, but I came up here with papa instead. I don't care for balls."

"Sort of late to be primping up for a ball," said McVeigh, restoring the toothpick to his pocket and pushing back his chair. "I'll go and have a look at the horses. And, Governor, if you'll be ready in fifteen minutes I'll be round at the porch waiting."

Cannon nodded, and, as the driver clumped off over the board floor, said to his daughter:

The Lamp of Life.
 The comparison of human life to the burning and going out of a lamp was familiar with Latin authors, as we know by the term series decrepiti. Plutarch explains the origin of this metaphor thus: The ancients never extinguished their lamps, but suffered them to go out of their own accord—that is, by the last crackle. Hence a lamp just about to expire was said decrepita, to cease to crackle. Hence, metaphorically, persons on the verge of the grave were called decrepit men.

World's Cables Made in America.
 Practically all the world's cables are made in this country, the first having been made in 1857, the total length of the wire in the sheathing and core being sufficient to reach from the earth to the moon. When the sea is about three miles deep, and the ship is steaming at its usual rate, paying out a new line, over two and a half hours will pass before the cable reaches the bed of the sea. By the time the cable has settled to rest the ship is 25 miles away.

FLYING MEN FALL.
 victims to stomach, liver and kidney troubles just like other people, with like results in loss of appetite, backache, nervousness, headache, and tired, listless, run-down feeling. But there's no need to feel like that as T. D. Peabody, Henry Tenn., proved. "Six bottles of Electric Bitters," he writes, "did more to give me new strength and good appetite than all other stomach remedies I used." So they help everybody. Its folly to suffer when this great remedy will help you from the first dose. Try it. Only 50 cents at People's Drug Co.

POLITICAL PAMPHLET SOON TO BE ISSUED

Advertisement For State And Legislative Office Candidates Delivered To State Printer.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Aug. 10.—The much-discussed state political pamphlet to advertise the candidates for state and legislative office has been delivered by the state printer and an edition of 400,000 will be mailed by State Superintendent of Public Property W. L. Essmann, one to each voter in the state or district, as the case may be. To print this edition in the short time required by law necessitated the purchase of a $25,000 Hoe press, made to order, by the state printer, a Madison company. Another pamphlet will be published in September after the primaries have been held.

The only candidates for state office in the primary pamphlet are Adolph J. Schmitz of Milwaukee, democratic candidate for the nomination for governor; Gov. Francis E. McGovern, candidate for re-election; Henry A. Moehlenpach of Clinton, candidate for the democratic nomination for lieutenant governor; Henry Johnson of Suring and Henry Krumrey of Plymouth, Republican candidates for state treasurer; Charles A. Kading of Watertown, democratic candidate for attorney general; Phillip Lehner of Princeton and Walter C. Owen of Maiden Rock, republican candidates for attorney general.

Both Mr. Schmitz and Gov. McGovern pledge their efforts to uphold the income tax law, suggesting an amendment to cure it of obvious defects.

Mr. Schmitz' statement says: "True democrats believe that 'The People Shall Rule,' and Adolph J. Schmitz unhesitatingly and firmly declares that it would not only be wrong to insist upon the repeal of the law at this time, but cowardly abandonment of a Democratic principle without any cause or reason appearing therefor. Amend and perfect the law; provide therein that the question whether the people are for or against the taxing of incomes be submitted to the people and if the majority oppose an income tax, that all laws relating thereto be null and void, otherwise of force and effect."

"It may need amendment, as most new laws do; but experience under it and not the clamor of wealthy taxpayers should dictate what changes should be made."

Mr. Moehlenpach denounces the law as "unjust, unequal, and in some respects highly inquisitorial," and favors a referendum on whether the people desire the law as amended or prefer no income tax law.

Political Announcement. Written and authorized by Lucius E. Kennedy. Amount paid, $5.00 for each insertion.

For Assemblyman

LUCIUS E. KENNEDY

The progressive movement like the grand old republican party was born in Wisconsin and within the ranks of that party. I have always been a loyal supporter of this grand old party, and I cast my first ballot for the progressive movement that had its origin in that party and I have always supported its men and measures, as I firmly believe every true republican has and will, as I deem that party the best fitted to secure for and return to the people their Government.

I believe any person holding the office of assemblyman should at all times work for and in the interest of his constituents.

I favor an economical and business administration.

I favor such amendments to the income tax law that will make it a law that will be fair to all.

In view of the fact that the amendment to the State Constitution authorizing the income tax law was adopted by a majority vote at two sessions of the State Legislature and ratified by the people by a vote of four to one, I favor the re-submission of this law to a vote of the people.

I believe in the State university and am in favor of giving the board of regents, who have the management of this institution, sufficient money to carry on the work as it should be, but no more.

LUCIUS E. KENNEDY

JANESVILLE, WIS.

Republican Candidate for the nomination to the office of Member of Assembly for 1st district of Rock County.

PRIMARIES SEPT. 3rd.

PAID ADVERTISEMENT.

Written and publication authorized by Lewis E. Gettle in the interests of his candidacy for State Senator. Price 25 cents per inch each insertion.

LEWIS E. GETTLE Candidate for the Senate

TO THE VOTERS OF THE 22ND SENATORIAL DISTRICT:—

It is with some embarrassment that one writes of one's own work, but there seems to be no other way to properly present the matters appropriate for consideration.

"What service has the candidate rendered and what can he render to his constituents?" That shall be the prime question.

1. Pursuant to the request of the Rock County Board, secured the passage of bill authorizing counties to engage in the abstract business.

2. After vigorous fight, by request of Rock County Board, secured provision in state highway bill providing for an unpaid commission and for the return to the county of all money for highway construction paid to the state as taxes and for the return to the county of all automobile license money for road construction.

3. At request of bakeries of Rock County, defeated the so-called Sunday baking bill 154A, after it had been ordered engrossed by vote of 60 to 27. It appeared that the bill, if passed, would destroy about one-third of the shipping business of bakeries in Rock County.

4. At the request of numerous banks of Rock County, aided materially in defeating the bill limiting loans from savings accounts. The bill was defeated.

5. At the request of Rock County banks, secured passage of bill validating acknowledgements of instruments in favor of the banks taken by bank officers. This bill came very late and required on the floor to get it in at all.

6. Strongly aided Assemblyman Fisher in introducing and passing the Janesville Fourth avenue bridge bond bill long after the time for introducing bills had expired.

7. At the urgent request of Rock and Walworth County farmers, worked hard for and secured amendment of compulsory tuberculin test law, abrogating the compulsory feature and giving the farmer fairer compensation for cattle slaughtered.

8. Introduced and secured passage of bill permitting high school district, Town of Milton and Village of Milton, to dissolve.

9. At the request of Janesville railroad men, and because it was just, aided materially in passing bill relating to purchase of tickets.

10. Voted to dispense with contract labor at state prison as far as possible as being unfair to laborers and manufacturers. To establish twine manufacturing plant to benefit both farmer and laborer.

11. Voted for the workmen's compensation act as a measure of reasonable justice to working-men long denied to them.

12. At request of Rock and Walworth County Poultry Associations voted for a more equitable division of state aid to such associations.

13. Voted against many other bills which were purely in the interests of people of other sections of the state and against the interests of the taxpayers of Rock, Walworth and other counties in Southern Wisconsin. Notably, the terminal taxation bill, exempting from unit taxation and subjecting to local taxation lake terminal railway properties; also, bill to purchase stump pullers by state; also bill to exempt from operation of anti-pass law real estate agents engaged in selling northern lands.

14. The initiative and referendum joint resolution was proposed and largely worked out by me after quite exhaustive study. It was pronounced by Theodore Roosevelt and by many students of the problem from other states probably the sanest, safest and most complete system for a corrective on bad or corrupt legislation ever devised.

15. The income tax amendment had been adopted by the people by a vote of 4 to 1 in this state. All political parties endorsed it in their platforms. The principle is right and just. I did not vote for the present measure. Until something definite is known as to its results, it is too early to declare absolutely against it. It is certain that the farmer, house owner, and proprietor of visible, tangible property are paying too large a portion of the taxes. I believe strongly in an income tax that will compel the owner of intangible funds and securities to pay his just taxes. The present law should be amended and its administration greatly simplified.

16. At the request of Rock County people, I voted against measure to appoint salaried medical officer in each town for the compulsory medical examination of school children, but voted for free medical examination if parents permitted it.

17. Voted to submit woman suffrage bill to the people.

18. Voted against joint resolution for recall of judges.
